OLD WORLD NEWS.

Prince Fritz's Case Now Considered Hopeless.

EXCITEMENT IN GERMANY.

Bismarck Making Preparations for the Probable Misfortune.

[Copyrighted by the Western Associated Press.]

BERLIN, March 3.—The Imperial family has ceased to hope for the recovery of the Crown Prince. The first results of the microscopic examination by Professor Waldeyer, as communicated to the Emperor, are unfavorable, disclosing traces of cancer. The full official report of Professor Waldeyer will be delayed until Dr. Recklinghausen's analysis is added which forms part of the result of the examination. Court dispatches confirm the progress of the symptoms tending toward a fatal issue. The occasional appearance of improvement is followed by a renewal of the gravest indications. No immediate crisis is expected, but it is recognized that a sudden change for the worse may occur at any moment involving death. If the disease should be permitted to run its full course the Crown Prince may be able to return to Berlin in May, and pass his last days there. The question of the period of his return will be the only subject having the remotest political bearing that will be discussed during Prince William's presence at San Remo, and the decision arrived at will depend upon the personal inclination of the Crown Prince.

HE WISHES TO RETURN.

He himself has expressed an urgent desire to return to Berlin as soon as possible. He has stated his intention to the Emperor, who, coinciding with the Crown Prince, has relinquished his proposed journey to San Remo. The respites from suffering that the Crown Prince obtains, encourages the confidence that he will be able to return to Berlin. If he is fated to die suddenly at San Remo, he has everything ready. He has written his will and prepared a political testament for his successor. The presence of Prince William at the villa has cheered his mother and the Princesses. Comments adverse to Prince William continue to be heard in Berlin society. Significance is attached to the fact that none of the family met him in the San Remo station, where he arrived from Genoa in company with Prince Henry, his brother, and Professor Bergmann. He was received by the Prefect, the Mayor, and the German Consul. This arrangement was due to the Crown Prince, who sent instructions to Prince William, at Carlsruhe, that Prince Henry, with Dr. Bergmann, would meet him, the obvious object being to enable him to gain full knowledge of the condition of his father before seeing his mothers and sisters. The Crown Princess with the Princesses awaited him within the villa. It is understood that he received the warmest welcome and that

MANY TEARS WERE SHED

During the interview. Twenty minutes after his arrival the Crown Princess alone accompanied him to meet his father. During yesterday and today Prince William has been with the Crown Prince on the balcony and there was every appearance of cordiality between the father and son. Reports of coolness in their relations are chiefly traceable to French sources. The French papers vie with each other in malicious intentions. During the journey from Carlsruhe Prince William obtained a number of French papers, and was excited to anger by the stories in them of his selfish intentions toward the Crown Prince and his disregard of his father's sufferings. Throughout Germany public interest in the news from San Remo grows in intensity and the people of Berlin await the dispatches with the same eagerness and agitation as would be shown if a campaign involving the fate of the nation were in progress. Extra editions are rushed out, and the papers are excitedly read and discussed by groups on the street.

TO-DAY'S SAN REMO REPORT SAYS:

"The Crown Prince passed a fairly good night. There is no change in his condition as regards coughing and spitting. He feels stronger this morning in consequence of a good day yesterday. The weather is brilliant, and he will again sit awhile on the balcony to-day."

BISMARCK HAD A LONG CONFRENCE

With Emperor William, it is supposed with reference to the proposal to grant Prince William power to sign in the event of the temporary incapacity of the Emperor, concurrent with the prostration of the Crown Prince. The Crown Prince differs with Prince Bismarck on the question of a regency of this character. It is reported that the Emperor accedes to the proposal, admitting the force of Prince Bismarck's plea that a simultaneous illness of himself and the Crown Prince might create confusion in the management of public affairs. The Emperor is careful to show himself every day, either driving out or appearing at the window of the palace. This helps to calm the general perturbation.

THE RELATIONS OF RUSSIA

With the allied powers are taking developments exactly as was forecast in these dispatches. The diplomatic proposals of Russia have resulted in nothing definite. What is definite, however, is the frantic eagerness of Russia to obtain a war loan and her ceaseless preparations for war. The Revolutionary organ, the Svobodai, declares that war rapidly approaches and predicts the conquest and ruin of Russia and the submission of the Slavs to Germany unless the policy of the Czar is replaced by free national management of public affairs. However much he may be averse to war, the internal discord of Russia will soon force the Czar to risk the future of the Romanoff dynasty by challenging the Central powers.

A FAINT GLIMPSE OF PEACE

Is got in the action of the Czar in entrusting his brother, the Grand Duke Vladimir with the routine dealings between the ministers and the Czar. The wife of the Grand Duke, Princess of Mecklenberg, is a steadfast German, and sways the Duke in opposing the war party, but the Grand Duke's character is ill-fitted to cope with Ministers Talstoi, Vannovski and Polredonsteff, who are now guarding the Czar.

Gladstone on Home Rule.

LONDON, March 3.—Gladstone today, in returning thanks to 250 clergymen of the Church of England for a memorial drawn up by them in favor of home rule, said that he believed it would have the effect of greatly widening the growing conviction that neither honor nor advantage can possibly be gained by continued refusal to accord to the moderate and constitutionally expressed demands of the Irish people.

Russia's War Preparations.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 3.—The government has issued orders to expedite the collection of stores in Warsaw. Many officers who were on a furlough have been recalled to their their regiments. The attitude of the powers regarding Bulgaria irritates military and public circles in Russia.

A Break in the Ranks.

DUBLIN, March 3.—The Express affirms that there are internal dissensions in the Parnellite ranks which will shake the foundations of the National League. American inspiration, it says, is causing a number of the leaguers to join the Gaelic Association, which opposes Parnell's policy.

Our Interests Abroad.

GIBRALTAR, March 3.—The United States ship Enterprise will proceed to Tangier to support the demand of the American Consul at that place for the release of the Ameer under American protection, and who is imprisoned at Rabat.

A Knotty Question.

VIENNA, March 3.—Prince Lobanoff, Russian Ambassador, has presented Count Kalnoky with fresh proposals regarding Bulgaria. It is said that Count Kalnoky is inclined to consider the proposals favorably.

A Howling Hurricane.

LONDON, March 3.—A dispatch from Tamatave says that a hurricane has devastated that town. Eleven vessels were wrecked and twenty persons killed.

Fire at Keighley.

LONDON, March 3.—Two fleece mills at Keighley have been destroyed by fire. Loss $325,000.

Wilson Will Appeal.

PARIS, March 3.—M. Wilson and M. Ribeaudeau have appealed from the decision of the court.

OUR SOUTHERN SISTER.

Cleveland Sends a Cordial Greeting to President Diaz

CITY OF MEXICO, via Galveston, March 3.—The President to-day gave an audience to the new American Minister, General Bragg. The reception took place in the national palace. President Diaz stood on a dais surrounded by his entire cabinet. General Bragg was attired in his full uniform as Brigadier General of the United States Army and was accompanied by Secretary of the legation Connery. General Bragg said addressing the President: By the gracious consideration of the President of the United States of America I have been accredited Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Republic of which you are the distinguished head. In presenting my letter of credit, I am especially charged by the chief executive of the Government whose representative I have the honor to be, to bear to you the assurance of his highest esteem and his best wishes for the preservation to yourself and your people of your continued good health and for the prosperity of the Republic of Mexico, and also to make known to you the sincere desire of himself as well as the wish of the people, whose chief executive he is honored in being, that the bonds of amity between the two republics may not only continue, but be constantly strengthened by strict preservation of the national faith and the mutual extension by each republic to the other of the friendly offices which inspire confidence and trust, as well as by enlarged intercourse, both social and commercial, between the people of the two republics. For myself, sir, if in the execution of the high trust reposed in me, I shall be so fortunate as to contribute towards securing the ends so desired, I shall feel assured of the hearty approval of my chief and the great body of the American people. In conclusion, I now have have the honor to present to Your Excellency my letter of credence from Grover Cleveland, the President of the United States of America."

President Diaz replied in a most cordial manner.

An "Examiner" Celebration.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 3. — The first anniversary of the Daily Examiner under the present management was made the occasion to-day of a reception tendered to the friends of that journal. A large number of persons, including many prominent in political and social circles, visited the editorial rooms, and made an inspection of all departments of the paper. Refreshments were served in the rooms occupied by the local staff.

An Exciting Election.

SACRAMENTO, March 3.—The most exciting primary election ever held in this city took place today. The Republicans were electing delegates to the convention to be held on Monday evening. The main contest was in the Fourth Ward, where several fights occurred. There is an opposition ticket in the field for the alleged purpose of beating the boss rule.

Charges of Corruption.

SAN DIEGO, March 3.—The Sun this evening charges that Dr. Northrup, Health Officer, has collected from the citizens over $1,500 for services for which he receives a salary from the Municipality; also that in some instances he has collected fees for services for which he is now presenting bills.

PACIFIC COAST NEWS.

Twenty-nine Lives Lost by the Julia Disaster.

COLD WEATHER UP NORTH.

A Distillery Burned Down Near Fresno—Sale of the Dumbarton Tract.

[Associated Press Dispatches to the HERALD.]

VALLEJO, March 3.—About noon to-day the body of C. M. McDonald was recovered from the wreck of the steamer Julia. It was found lying beneath a portion of the boiler. The face and limbs were badly burned and the neck and four ribs broken. Deceased was 67 years old.

The wreck this afternoon lay moored to the wrecking steamer Whitelaw at the Point Cos a Lumber Company's wharf. The Captain of the wrecker was awaiting a rise of the tide in order to float the hull. With the exception of one pump the barrels of both boilers have been secured. The starboard boiler is turned inside out and ripped and torn in several places. The back tube sheet is pulled out and torn to pieces, the tubes being scattered in all directions. Both boilers had been patched several times and on the boiler the iron at the taper course joint was of two thicknesses one of a quarter and the other three-eighths of an inch. In both boilers the tubes were pulled out of the front head. On Monday the experts meet and will select pieces of boiler iron for testing.

The death roll reaches twenty-nine. Two of the wounded are having a hard fight for life.

VALUABLE PROPERTY.

Transfer of the Dumbarton Tract—Object of the Deal.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 3.—The formal transfer of the large Dumbarton tract on San Francisco Bay to the corporation known as the River, Harbor and Canal Dredging and Land Company, has formally taken place. The property transferred comprises a strip about 17 miles long, by from 2½ to 3 miles wide, beginning at a point nearly opposite Alvarado and extending south to Alviso and including the Cape known as Dumbarton Point. It is intersected by nine navigable sloughs, at the heads of which are established six shipping points or landings, fully equipped with warehouses and lumber yards. The main channel at the point has a depth of about 36 feet at low tide, and is about half a mile wide affording a continuous waterway to the Golden Gate. This is the only point on the eastern shore of the bay, south of Oakland, accessible to large vessels. The property has a total area of 19,000 acres, and the corporation has made a deposit, agreeing to pay $679,000 for the tract. Taken in consideration with the rapid construction of the San Francisco and San Joaquin Valley railroad through the San Joaquin valley, which is declared to be the line by which the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad will seek entrance into this city, the purchase of the Dumbarton point is credited to the Santa Fe road. The San Joaquin road is now nearly graded from Mojave to a point near Tracy, and its engineers are now looking for a pass below Livermore to the bay of San Francisco. This would furnish direct connection from Mojave to the bay of San Francisco.

AN APPEAL FROM ARIZONA.

Settlers Object to the Proposed Land Grant Commission.

PHOENIX, Ariz., March 3.—At a mass meeting of the citizens of Salt River Valley last evening, resolutions were unanimously adopted condemning the bills introduced in Congress to create a commission for the settlement of the Spanish grants in Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado, inasmuch as they menace the prosperity of the territory by opening the door for litigation.

THE RESOLUTIONS SAY

"We bought our land from the Government, entered upon and improved the same in the knowledge and belief that the political and not the judicial arm of the Government had power to adjudicate the rights of claimants under Spanish or Mexican land grants and any attempt to transfer such power to a commission is unwise, unjust and impolitic. We, as people interested to the extent of our homes and possessions are willing to trust to the honesty, fairness and justice of the representatives of the Nation to deal equitably as between a settler and claimant in the settlement of land titles in the Territory."

WINE WASTED.

A Distillery Destroyed by Fire in Fresno County.

FRESNO, March 3.—Last night about 12:30 the Marguerita winery and distillery, situated five miles east of this city and owned by Messrs. E. B. Rogers and J. H. Malher, of San Francisco, was totally destroyed by fire over 200,000 gallons of wine, valued at $150,000, including the winery and distillery buildings and machinery valued at over $50,000 being consumed. The origin of the fire is unknown. The fire in the engine was put out at 5 o'clock in the evening. The fire was fought by the Superintendent and his men, but they were unable to do anything owing to the water tank being on fire. The property is partially insured.

IN GARDNER'S DEFENCE.

An Explanation of How He Obtained the Brooks Letters.

SEATTLE, March 3.—The Customs officials explain the possession by E. A. Gardner, arrested at Ogdensburg, N. Y., for opium smuggling, of the letters addressed to Collector Brooks, as follows: Many letters are received by the collector giving alleged clues to the operations of smugglers. These letters are turned over to the Chief Inspector, who investigates the charges made. Gardner and Terry were inspectors on the steamer North Pacific, in Seattle, last April, at the time of the seizure of a chest with a false top and sides, containing opium, which was seized, and the smuggler arrested. The chest was bought by Gardner at the Customs sale. The officials did not know what became of it till found in his possession at Ogdensburg but all agree that he knew nothing of it before its seizure here in April. Special Agent Beecher denies that he has been summoned to attend Gardner's trial.

POORLY PAID.

Strike of the Clerks of the Spokane Falls Postoffice.

SPOKANE FALLS, W. T., March 3.—A sensation was created here last evening by four clerks in the postoffice quitting work in a body, leaving Postmaster Peel alone, when, it is understood, he wired his resignation. The office is second-class, but the postmaster is only allowed $2,000 salary and $700 clerk service. The clerks threatened to resign before, and Assistant-Postmaster-General Stevenson increased the allowance, but not sufficiently to be satisfactory. The postmaster is in arrears on salaries and rent since July, for all of which he is held personally responsible. The expense of the office is nearly $5,000 per year. The office is likely to be closed.

THE BAR SINISTER.

It Does Not Entail a Loss of the Rights of Heirship.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 3.—Judge Coffey rendered a decision to-day in the Jessup will case in favor of Richard Page Jessup, claimant of the estate of Jerome P. Jessup, who died in this city less than two years ago, leaving an estate valued at $100,000. It was generally understood that he died a bachelor and with no heirs save a brother and sister. The present claimant appeared and urged that he was a son of the deceased, born out of wedlock, and that Jessup had always recognized him as a son. The Court holds that the evidence is ample that Jessup recognized the claimant as his son, and that fact entitles him to a share in the estate as an heir.

PLENTY OF ENTERPRISE.

Fresno Striving to Get More Railroad Facilities.

FRESNO, March 3 —A mass-meeting was held here to-night at the Opera House to secure the main line of the Wilbur Page Paulsell Railroad. About one-half of the required amount was secured within half an hour. $200,000 will be required. Resolutions were passed to the effect that the amount should be raised, and within three days. Guarantees have been sent in by wealthy citizens quite sufficient to insure the amount required.

Wants to Get Ashore.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 3.—George H. Camp, a passenger on the City of Peking, is trying to get released from the quarantined steamer by means of habeas corpus. Dr. McAllister, Quarantine Officer, is opposing the proceedings, and says that if the quarantine will not hold in this case there is no use in trying to prevent any one coming from infected parts and getting ashore.

He Carried a Pistol.

SANTA CRUZ, March 3.—H. F. Kron, proprietor of a tannery in this city and a member of the City Council, was shot and murdered by H. D. C. Barnhardt to-day. The latter, who is from Modesto, has been writing articles for a paper here accusing Kron of malfeasance in office. When the men met to-day Kron struck him and was shot in return. Barnhardt was placed under $5,000 bonds.

The A. & P. Strike Over.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 3.—A telegram was received to-day by W. A. Bissell, General Western Agent of the Atlantic and Pacific, from W. A. Biddle, Division Freight and Passenger Agent at Albuquerque, stating that the strike on that road was over, and that both passenger and freight trains were running on regular time.

Resigned Through Ill-Health.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 3.—Captain Charles Wilson resigned the position of local Inspector of Hulls to-day. Captain Wilson was appointed only a short time ago, and his resignation is due to ill-health. Collector Hager, Judge Hoffman and Supervising Inspector Lubbock will appoint his successor next week.

Missed His Footing.

PORTLAND, Ogn., March 3.—At Astoria last night Adolph Olsen, a sailor aged 27 years, employed as pilot of the schooner Governor Moody, fell from a plank between the schooner and the dock. He was not missed till this morning at low tide when his body was found. He struck on a pile under the water and broke his arm. A contusion on his head shows that he was stunned.

Used to the Stiletto.

VIRGINIA, CITY, March 3.—G. B. Morello was stabbed three times to-night by John Caseleggio in Capuro's saloon on North C street. The wounds will probably prove fatal. Both men are Italians and said to have been strangers to each others. Morello's assailant fled after the stabbing, but the officers are on his trail and will probably capture him before morning.

OUR LEGISLATORS.

Internal Revenue Reductions Suggested.

POST TO RETAIN HIS SEAT.

The Pacific Railway Telegraph Bill Passes by an Overwhelming Majority.

[Associated Press Dispatches to the HERALD]

WASHINGTON, March 3.—It is stated that internal revenue reductions were agreed on yesterday by the Democrats of the Ways and Means Committee, and will be reported to the full committee early next week and considered with the tariff bills. They effect a total reduction of about $24,000,000 or $25,000,000. The tobacco tax, except on cigars and cigarettes, is repealed, reducing the revenue about $19,000,000. The licenses abolished will make a reduction of between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000. There is no reduction on spirits of any kind. Manufacturers of fruit brandies are allowed to place their product in bonded warehouses and take warehouse receipts for the same time as whisky distillers now have. Some extreme penalties have been lessened.

THE HOUSE.

The Pacific Railway Telegraph Bill Passes.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Henry C. Seymore, successor to S. O. Moffatt, of Michigan, deceased, appeared before the bar of the House and took the oath of office.

Laird of Nebraska, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported a bill authorizing the construction of roads from the entrance of the Presidio at San Francisco to the National cemetery. Calendared.

Tillman of South Carolina, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, reported a bill authorizing the issue of fractional silver certificates. Referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Craine of Texas, from the Committee on election of President and Vice President, reported back his joint resolution proposing constitutional amendments, changing the time for the commencement of the Presidential term and changing the date for the annual meeting of Congress. Put on the calendar.

THE TELEGRAPH BILL.

The House then resumed as special business the consideration of the Pacific railroad telegraph bill and White (of New York) took the floor in opposition to the measure.

Symes (of Colorado) said that the purposes of the bill were merely to compel the subsidized railroads to comply with the conditions of the provisions of the grants creating them. The contracts between the Union and Central Pacific railroad companies, and the Western Union Telegraph company were void ab initio, and no lawyer in America knew it better than the gentleman from New York, (White). They were at the time they were made, and still were, in direct violation of the express provisions of the statutes and grants creating the Pacific railroad and telegraph companies, and were in violation of the public policy and against the public law. The contracts under consideration had been made with the object and intention of defeating every substantial requirement of the grants. After Jay Gould and his ring had conducted the Union Pacific as long as they could make anything out of it, they had walked off, leaving the company bankrupt, and taking along with them the assets of the telegraph lines, with which they levied discriminating tribute from the people west of the Missouri river.

Dockery, of Missouri, said that under the granting acts the Pacific companies were required to construct, not only railroad lines, but also telegraph lines. Instead of doing so they had assumed to divest themselves of their obligations by a contract with the Western Union Telegraph Company, conferring upon that company the exclusive right-of-way along the railroad lines. The acts of Congress requiring that telegraph lines along the Pacific roads should receive all business without discrimination were nullified by this unlawful contract with the Western Union Company.

Dockery, after attacking Jay Gould, said that competition was essential to the best interests of the whole people, and if necessary (and he believed it to be necessary) to the power of the government.

At the close of Dockery's speech White offered his substitute, which was rejected without a division, and the bill was passed. Yeas, 197; nays, 4. (Bliss, Ketchem, Merriam and White nays.) The House then adjourned.

SENATE COMMITTEE WORK.

Favorable Report Made of the Spooner Bill.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—The Postoffice Committee of the Senate today decided to report favorably what is known as the Spooner bill to regulate inter-state telegraphy. There were some amendments made to the bill, but they are chiefly of explanatory matter and do not materially change the provisions of the bill. The chief amendment is the incorporation of an equivalent to the "long and short haul" clause in the Interstate Commerce bill, but there is a provision that it shall be unlawful to charge more for transmitting a message a short distance than for transmitting a long distance in the same direction.

FORFEITED LAND.

The Senate Committee on Public Lands to-day considered the proposed amendments to the General Land Forfeiture Bill. It agreed to report favorably upon the provision fixing the price of land forfeited and opened to settlement under the bill, at $1.25 an acre.

HOUSE COMMITTEES.

Post to Retain his Seat for the Tenth Illinois District.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—The House Committee on Elections, in the Washington-Post contest case, decided unanimously in favor of Post, the Republican sitting member from the Tenth Illinois district.

While Post claimed to be elected by 29 majority, the committee found that he had received 59 votes more than his opponent. This result was obtained by careful scrutiny of the 300 or more contested ballots and the counting of such as showed on their face the intention of the voter.

The Secretary of the Interior in a letter to the Attorney General, has recomended him to drop the proceedings being instituted against the Southern Pacific Railway Company, to the end that a decree may be obtained directing the manner in which the partition of "tenant in common" lands may be obtained.

The House Committee on Printing to-day continued its investigation of Benedict's administration of the Government printing office, the examination being conducted by Representative Gallinger. At the outset the witness reiterated his former assertion that he had observed the civil service law during his incumbency of office. He had never held any examinations for appointments, but had arranged the manner of the higher class of work. Witness would not deny that he had refused to reinstate any discharged person because he had learned, upon investigation, that he was a Republican. He had only two relatives in his employ in the printing office.

A CHAT WITH CARLISLE.

He is Loud in His Praises of the New Tariff Bill.

CHICAGO, March 3.—A Times special from Wichita, Kas., says: Speaker Carlisle, who is in the city attending the bedside of his sick son, said today: "Mills' tariff bill is a very conservative measure, and ought to be passed. The existing financial and industrial situation would have justified much more radical measures, but there are always so many differences of opinions about the details that it is impossible to do exactly what ought to be done. The bill has been prepared with great care and it has been the purpose of the framer to deal fairly and liberally with any interest affected by it. There has been no feeling of hostility to capital or labor employed in the manufacturing industries, and the bill, if passed will not hurt them. I think that the bill will pass substantially as reported. If it be defeated the Democratic party will appeal to the people on this question at the next election, and a Congress will be chosen that will reduce the revenue much more than is now proposed."

AUSTIN, Tex., March 3.—Governor Ross received the following dispatch to-day from Eagle Pass, Tex.: "A couple of lieuteuants and two soldiers of the Mexican army came over this morning and attempted to kidnap a deserter. DEEPLY IN DEBT.

Investigation of the Union Pacific's Affairs.

AN ADDRESS BY ANDERSON.

Creed Haymond Speaks on Behalf of the Central Pacific Company.

[Associated Press Dispatches to the HERALD]

WASHINGTON, March 3.—The Senate special committee, to which was referred the reports of the Pacific Railway Commission, gave further hearing to-day on matters relating to affairs of the Union Pacific.

Commissioner Anderson addressed the committee, explaining substantially, as he had previously explained to the House Committee the provisions of the Commissioners's bill. At the meeting he was led by inquiries to explain by way of illustration the methods of the Central Pacific. Briefly, he said this company, instead of devoting its earnings to dividends, had invested them in collateral enterprises without, however, charging the money taken to the account of earnings. Some years subsequently it had declared dividends apparently within the letter of the law, because its earnings still showed

AN UNDIVIDED SURPLUS,

When, in fact, the money had been expended. So the property so purchased had depreciated in value. Money to pay dividends had been borrowed or obtained from any source available. It was to prevent transactions of this kind in the future that the commission proposed to limit the power to declare dividends to the amount of the net earnings of the preceding years, holding that the intervening time was insufficient to merely endanger the value of any property purchased; while as a guard against fraud, there was a provision requiring the assent of the President of the United States to any investment of this kind.

MORGAN ASKS A QUESTION.

During the Commissioner's explanation of the nature of the security now possessed by the Government for the Union Pacific debt and that to be given by the company under the provisions either of the Commissioners or the Outhwaite bill, Senator Morgan asked if he (Anderson) was prepared, as a lawyer, to assert that the Government has no right to declare a statutory lien now for further security bonds upon any property that may be possessed by the company.

To this Anderson replied that he was prepared to make that assertion; that while the United States might require the company to do anything in reason, it could not extend its lien over one inch of property that was not authorized by statutory provision.

AN OPINION BY MORGAN.

Later, during the hearing, Senator Morgan read the following, which he had in the meantime written out, covering his views of the point thus raised.

"The legislative power is able to give remedy by legal or equitable attachment according to the nature of the property sequestered, and to contract with a creditor whose demand is not yet due; and an attachment can also be prescribed in the statute, according to the judgment of the legislature. In this case the necessity of doing this by the general law, (if there is any such necessity) is avoided by the reservation of the power to alter or amend the statute. I suppose that the reservation has as much reference to providing for the security of the mortgaged estate as to any other possible need for legislative interference, and that under its provisions Congress could give such remedy against the consolidated company."

Anderson contended that if the question thus raised shall come up at all, it will come not as against the Union Pacific, which now offers ample security for the debt, but against the Central Pacific.

ATTORNEY HAYMOND'S VIEWS.

To this Mr. Haymond, attorney for the Central Pacific, rejoined that the reputation and integrity of the Central Pacific directors having been assailed, they would assent to no bill which proposes to settle the question upon a mere moneyed basis. They would assent to any bill which provides for a fair investigation of all these facts by the courts, and would hear all questions of the statute of limitation, and all questions as to whether they were bound to the Government, and would agree with the United States upon the same principles that governed the transactions of a guardian with his ward. They claimed that they had done no wrong to the United States. That was why he had proposed to the Commissioners a few days ago to go over this case upon an entirely different basis, because he was advised that the directors of the Central Pacific would not make a moneyed settlement. They could afford to lose this property but they could not afford to trade upon their reputation, character and standing.

The New Chinese Treaty.

THE POWER OF PERSUASION.

A Story of the Time When T. E. Rowan was Under Sheriff.

EDITORS HERALD.—As your journal is read by all the old-timers, and by most of the new ones, the subjoined little narration of facts may be acceptable. It was during last August, while enjoying a vacation at that most charming of places, San Juan Capistrano, that I came in possession of them. Sitting under the shade of a broad piazza in front of the hospitable mansion of Judge Richard Egan, with that gentleman, Don Marco Forster and others, it was but natural that those gentlemen should grow reminiscent and delight a tenderfoot with incidents that occurred before his time on the Golden Coast. One of those little incidents as illustrating the power of eloquent pursuasion and the ascendency of mind over matter, was so interesting that I have always considered it too good to be lost, and with your permission will perpetuate it. Away back when Don David Alexander was sheriff of this county, Mr. T. E. Rowan, or as his old friends love to call him, "Tommy," was his faithful under sheriff. (Since that time Mr. Rowan has been called by the people to fill several positions of honor and profit, and has had many experiences, but I will venture to say that none of them afforded him the amusement and satisfaction which the one I am about to relate did.)

Well, to my tale: A Mexican named Ballesteros, a good-hearted fellow at bottom, but a perfect devil when aroused by either rage or drink, and a man calculated to defy all the laws, religious, civil and military, when the spirit moved him, became engaged in a row, and with a knife cut a brother Mexican nearly to pieces. Ballesteros was pretty drunk at the time, and his arrest was made with much less difficulty than if he had acted in rage and not in liquor. He was arrested, tried, found guilty of assault with intent to murder, and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary. In due time the prisoner, in charge of a deputy sheriff, was started on his way to his place of retirement. In those days Los Angeles had no transcontinental railroads, and the steamship was the easiest mode of communication with the Northern Citrus Belt. Accordingly Ballesteros was sent by way of San Pedro. On arriving at that port the prisoner, who was like as a panther, wily as a fox and bold as a lion, made a dash for liberty and escaped from the deputy sheriff.

Pursuit was in vain, as he was supposed to have gained the hills, and having many relations and friends his recapture was despaired of. The case had attracted considerable attention, and Don David, the sheriff, was much worried over the escape. It was well known that he would have given almost anything to have Ballesteros back again, and, in fact, he brooded over the escape and refused to be comforted.

Shortly after the break for liberty Mr. Rowan drove in a light buggy to San Juan Capistrano to serve some papers in an important civil suit. After performing his official duty the genial gentlemen concluded to spend a few days with his friends in that locality, and about every man, woman and child down there was accounted his friends. Of course he stopped with Judge Egan, who was a Judge then, is a Judge now and will always be a Judge.

The second day of Mr. Rowan's stay he was informed that Ballesteros with a number of adherents was strongly entrenched in a little cañon up on the Santa Margarita rancho, and thinking how his chief, Don David, was mourning the absence of Ballesteros, he conceived the idea of bringing the escape back to Los Angeles. He imparted this thought to his friends and they hooted at him. Why, said they: "You will offer yourself up to slaughter. It would take an army to dislodge this man from his entrenched position." Nevertheless Mr. Rowan did not falter. He wanted to gratify Don David and was determined to do it. He finally asked if Ballesteros had a friend in San Juan who would carry a message to him. He was answered that he had a score who would readily go. Accordingly Mr. Rowan selected a young Mexican and sent the following message to the escaped prisoner: "I am here after you and don't care to take the touble to come up the cañon to get you. Please come down and save trouble."

The Mexican messenger came back the next day with a broad grin on his face and delivered the following return message: "I am in the cañon, and any friend of mine in San Juan Capistrano will conduct you to the place, but if you come I will get you, and not you me. Depart in peace."

Mr. Rowan's friends all said: "We told you so;" and indulged in much hilarity at his expense. Their merriment got Mr. Rowan's Irish up, and he said: "Now I will take Ballesteros back to Los Angeles with me, and there will be no blood shed and no handcuffs used." This was received with a roar of laughter also.

Mr. Rowan then wrote in Spanish the following message to Ballesteros: "I have no evil designs on you, but what I do is for your own good. I want you to come to San Juan tomorrow evening and let me have just one-half hour's conversation with you. If at the end of the talk you wish to return to the mountains you can do so without the least hinderance from me or from anybody else. Judge Egan and Don Pablo Pryor stand my security for this pledge."

Both the Judge and Don Pablo signed this, and the messenger sped up the mountain side. He returned very shortly and said that at the appointed time Ballesteros would be on hand.

This caused great surprise and Mr. Rowan's friends said: "Why what the devil do you want with him? He is under sentence, and you don't think he is going to give himself up to five years penal servitude do you, when he is now free as air?"

Mr. Rowan only repled: "Never mind, Judge, please have a nice Spanish dinner with wine in the left room (the Judge then inhabited an adobe) at 5 o'clock, and don't let anybody disturb Señor Ballesteros and myself while we are in there."

Just at 5 o'clock Ballestros dashed into town mounted upon a magnificent black mustang. He stopped in front of the Judge's house and rapidly dismounting, divested himself of a brace of six-shooters and a Winchester rifle which he hung over the saddle and walked to the porch, when he was saluted courteously by all present. (It is needless to say the greater portion of the populace of San Juan had caught wind of the affair and was gathered in close proximity to the Judge's residence.) It was a critical moment. Mr. Rowan advanced to Ballesteros and extended his hand, which was accepted, and everybody felt that all was right. The two then went to the left room and instead of the half-hour stipulated for, they remained in there for nearly two hours. In the meantime all was excitement and conjecture on the outside. "Did Ballesteros retain his knife?" "Could they have throttled each-other?" and similar questions passed. Not a sound could be heard, as the thick adobe walls refused to give up any of the secrets of that conference.

At the conclusion of what seemed an interminable time, the door opened and the pair emerged. Mr. Rowan said in his most suave and smiling way: "Judge we are awfully dry, wont you tell somebody to bring up some wine from that inexhaustable cellar of yours so that we can quench our thirst?"

The order was quickly obeyed and then, Mr. Rowan, turning in the most nonchalant way to Judge Egan said: "By the way Judge, my friend Mr. Ballesteros is going to Los Angeles with me to-morrow; will you kindly take charge and care of his horse and his weapons until he returns, or until you hear from me, and also please provide a bed for him to-night?"

If a thunderbolt had fallen it would not have caused more astonishment in that crowd. But there was Ballesteros smiling and shaking hands with his friends as if it was the most natural thing in the world for him to be going back to a prison that he could just as well have kept out of.

The next day Mr. Rowan drove into Los Angeles with Ballesteros and delivered him over to Don David Alexander, whose joy was without bounds. Ballesteros was duly sent to the penitentiary, but was pardoned at the end of two years and returned here. When he got back he was presented with a new suit of clothes, a horse, saddle and bridle, and a small sum of money. What became of him afterwards is uncertain, but I have heard that he was stabbed to death in San Diego county.

As to what occurred in that room between him and Mr. Rowan, I don't know, but those who have ever been brought within the influence of "Tommy" Rowan's seductive tongue can realize, and those who haven't, can ask him. H. W. P.

Prudence! Prudence!

In medication, as in aught else, prudence should be our guide. Yet thousands cast it to the winds. Every new nostrum finds its patrons, the medical empirics of every false school have their gulls. Every change in the gamut of humbug is rising successfully—for a time at least—the notes being furnished by the credulous. In happy contrast to the many advertised impostures of the day stands Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, now in its third decade of popularity, approved and recommended by physicians, indorsed by the press of many lands, sought and prized by invalids everywhere. It is an ascertained specific for and preventive of malarial diseases, chronic indigestion, liver complaint and constipation, checks the growth of rheumatism and neuralgia, is a peerless invigorant and useful diuretic. Nervous people benefit by it.

Illustrated Annual Herald.

The matter is now being prepared for this popular publication. The edition will be larger than ever before, and its columns will be filled with carefully prepared matter reflecting the progress and industry of Southern California. The illustrations will be more numerous than ever before, and in point of excellence the engraver's art will maintain the high reputation this publication has deservedly gained. Parties desirous of availing themselves of the advantages this special edition offers for advertising and write-ups, will do well to hand in their orders at as early a day as possible.

ADVICES from Washington are to the satisfactory and encouraging effect that the Department of State has about negotiated a new treaty with the Chinese Government, by the terms of which the immigration of Mongolian laborers into this country will be absolutely and entirely prohibited. It has long been known that the Imperial Government of China did not oppose such a treaty. That government cares but little for the welfare, or even for the lives of such of its people as are wont to migrate to other countries in search of some little betterment of their hard fate in life. Human life is held but as a pawn in China. It is most cheaply rated, and the governing classes waste but little sympathy on the miserable Coolies who swarm so thickly in that ancient realm. The difficulty about these people has all the time existed nowhere outside the United States. Cheap labor is a thing much desired by those who pay for it, particularly in such great schemes as require armies of merely unskilled laborers. Such combinations in the United States have not been able to procure labor on cheap enough terms—if men worked for ten cents a day, many of these heartless monopolists would want to cut the rate to five cents. Hence has come all the opposition to the prohibition of Chinese from the Union. These people have used the subservient element of the Republican party—always a predominating proportion of the politicians of that party—as their willing tools. Sentimental religious prejudice has been called in to bolster up this bad course. When Chinese immigration was a burning question on this coast, politicians of the stripe of that cold, callous millionaire, and subservient tool of millionaires, John Sherman, lifted high their voice, used all their influence and voted against all measures looking to any curtailment of the influx of these beggarly hordes to our shores. But Sherman was not in those days a hopeful candidate for Presidential honors. He has changed his expressions on this subject of late. His views are the same as of yore; but he disguises his true sentiments. As Sherman has stood towards this matter, so have all his confrères in and out of the Senate, with exceptions so few, one may count them on the fingers of one hand, and still have digits to spare. It shall not at all surprise us to learn that the Imperial Government of China is a willing party to a treaty whose terms shall absolutely preclude the Mongols from flocking to our ports.

MAJOR BENYUARD of the United States Engineer Corps has sent to Congress his report on the San Pedro harbor. This accomplished engineer succeeds Colonel Geo. H. Mendell in charge of such work on the coast. He is perfectly familiar with San Pedro, its commerce, needs and the possibilities of making a safe harbor at that point. He is entirely en rapport with his predecessor, Colonel Mendell, who for twenty years has been constant in the view that San Pedro could be made a good harbor, and that improvements ought to be made there by the General Government. It is a full score of years, and rather more, since Colonel Mendell first recommended San Pedro to the attention of Congress. In all this score of years there has been spent in the improvement of our little seaport, the paltry sum of $750,000. The beggarly character of this outlay is the more emphasized when it is recalled to mind that this is the sum total of all expenditures on the part of the Federal Government for the benefit of the commerce of South California. On 500 miles of coast there has been expended less than $1,000,000. Major Benyuard estimates the cost of properly improving the harbor at San Pedro, at a trifle over $4,000,000. There was received at this port last month 24,000,000 feet of lumber, and there came to hand there over 7,000 tons of coal. The commerce of the port is of quite considerable proportions to-day, and it is rapidly growing. The present Congress should not hesitate for one moment to vote the sum asked for. It would not all to be spent in one year. The work would stretch over at least four years, calling for only $1,000,000 a year.

AN ITINERANT blackmailing correspondent of the New York Herald called at the office of the Providencia Land, Water and Development Company a few weeks ago, and endeavored to impress upon the minds of the officers of that corporation that it was essential to its interests, if not absolutely necessary to its existence, that he should give the town of Burbank a "good send off" in his coming letter. He wanted only two hundred dollars for a complimentary effusion; for taffy ad infinitum only a small amount more would be required. His demand should have been considered modest for one endowed with such rare epistolary eloquence. Had he not borne on his face the imprint: "I live on my wits," the company might have been taken in, and he have received the shekels. When he was informed that the company did not want any of his confectionery, he threw off his mask and, like a true knight of the road, demanded a "put up" or else a "write up." His agility in reaching the street saved the company the expense of putting in a new wire-screen door, as his cheek would have undoubtedly damaged it as he was being kicked through it. In an article published in the New York Herald of February 16th, 1888, he tries to get even with the company. By a flourish of his pencil he issues a decree of annihilation. He endeavors to sweep the fair town of Burbank from the face of the earth and to efface the pleasant impressions made upon the minds of those who have visited it. The majestic height of his egotism looms up grandly in his first sentence. He writes "A critic once laid down the rule that no writer can succeed in describing what he has not seen"—forgetting that Dante was never in Hades, nor Milton in Paradise. They accomplished this, so he, the tramp, blackmailing correspondent of the New York Herald could write up Burbank without having seen it. Elsewhere the company furnish a statement of the expenditures made by them in permanent improvements. This statement shows that there is substance in the backing of Burbank, and that its promoters and projectors are men of honor as well as enterprise.

BY SELECTING the pods of Lima beans which contained four seeds and planting these, I found next year that the number containing four beans had greatly increased, most of those previously containing only one or two. The process was repeated, and the result the second year was that a majority of the pods then contained four beans and a few had five beans. In the third year scarcely a pod contained less than three, the majority four and a large number five.—[Rural New Yorker.

There is the whole history in little of all the progress made since the world began in the improvement of all life, whether it be vegetable or animal. The philosopher Darwin claims that all forms of life have been developed by a long series of natural selection. Whether that theory be correct or not, there is no room for discussion on the proposition that all species of animals or vegetables reach their highest development—indeed can be improved scarcely at all in any way but by careful artificial selection. This is a principle which should never be absent from the mind of the agriculturist. No farmer can afford to scatter seed hap-hazard in the soil. He should carefully select every seed he sows, and should never breed excepting through the most perfect specimens of animal life at his command. It costs no more to produce a good ear of corn or a fine animal than it does for a mildewed ear or for cattle of Pharaoh's lean kind.

SAN DIEGO, as represented in her press, has been rather persistent in the claim that more commerce enters the bay at that point, than comes in at San Pedro. As a matter of fact in January last the lumber disembarked along the wharfes of our neighbor to the south was 10,000,000 feet, whereas the arrivals of this sort at San Pedro came to 13,000,000 feet. In February the arrivals of lumber were 24,000,000 at San Pedro and 18,000,000 feet at San Diego. The difference in our favor is about one-third. Lumber may be taken as an index of what is the general rule. Besides there is this very vast difference—the stuff disembarked at San Diego is largely destined for use in the valley lying between this city and San Bernardino. It comes into our back county, and this portion of its trade we will wrench from our neighbors' grasp, "as sure as eggs is eggs." With the improvement of San Pedro harbor we shall have ample facilities to handle all our commerce. The short haul is what tells.

The Latest Prevaricator.

For the past three years a real estate boom has been in progress in Los Angeles, California. Relying upon the statements of interested parties that the State was the garden spot of the continent, and Los Angeles the gem of the garden spot, emigrants flocked to the town in large numbers and paid fabulous sums for realty. The result is summed up in a letter to the Minneapolis Tribune, a paragraph of which reads:

"There is no property selling. I can buy more than I can pay for here of parties who paid one-third down and want to drop their holdings and lose what they have put in and save their paper from protest. The country is full of malaria, and a small druggist told me that his sales of quinine were over three thousand grains a week. I feel like joking these real estate dealers about their boom, but they are so serious that it is like trying to joke a corpse."

And the country is full of malaria. This is a verification of the predictions of the climatologists, who hold that, once California is thoroughly irrigated, all that portion of the State not seven thousand feet above the sea level will be malarial.—[Dubuque, Ia., Paper.

The above paragraphs were sent to a resident in this city from a brother in Iowa. The clipping was accompanied by a letter, as follows:

PARKERSBURG, Iowa, 21st February.

BROTHER CHARLIE: Since writing you yesterday I chanced to pick up a Dubuque paper containing the inclosed extract from a letter written to a Minneapolis paper.

I wonder if the writer had the shakes while there? Three thousand grains of quinine in one week is pretty good—a little over six ounces. Allowing six grains to the dose, which is about the average dose, would be 500 doses. Say there are ten stores in the city selling an equal amount, which would make 30,000 grains a week, or 5000 doses of six grains each, that would be one dose for 5000 people out of a population of 50,000, making it out that ten per cent. of the whole are troubled with malaria in your city. But it is not supposed that each one got just the six grains, but from ten to thirty grains, say average twenty grains, that would reduce the per cent. down to about three per cent or three and a half per cent. So it don't make it so terrible malarial after all. Los Angeles should be about as bad a place as any for that disease, being only about half the altitude the writer gives as above the danger line as 7000 feet. Los Angeles should be a Libby prison in the Tropics of peace and civilization.

But perhaps the writer is some way interested in a Minneapolis boom, or he may be one of the "subsidized writers of the press."

Irrigation no doubt has and will have a marked influence on the climate and health of the people; also on the diseases, their nature and effects, etc., the wonderful growth of vegetation and the decay that will follow will influence a country for health. But when we take into consideration the dry atmosphere and the clear cold streams of pure water that go thundering down the mountains and through the cañons out upon the beautiful valleys still pure, it cannot in my mind produce any great amount of malaria diseases. But I presume Los Angeles will go right along just the same.

WILLIS.

P. S. On taking a second thought, Los Angeles is only about 400 feet above sea level, making it still more perilous for the city.

There is no use attempting a serious discussion of this question. Our views will not reach the readers of the Minneapolis Tribune in this way, and our own readers know, as well as we could tell them, how thoroughly false every view here set forth is. For example, sales of realty last month overtopped $7,600,000. The sales yesterday reached $254,000. There are no people here who want to "drop their holdings," excepting at an advance of 100 per cent. Malaria, as we are all aware, is almost unknown. But why waste time answering those fabrications, made, no doubt, by interested persons.

DURING the month of February there arrived in the State by the Southern Pacific Company's lines 8649 persons. The arrivals by sea were 1543, making a total of 10,192. The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé lines probably brought in not many less people than did their competitors. The departures from the State were only 41[illegible] The additions of population to t[illegible] State for the past month can not [illegible] been less than 10,000. At that rate there is being made additions to our population of 100,000 to 125,000 souls per year. Much the larger half of this comes to the south end of the State. And this with other similar facts goes to prove all Los Angeles claims when we say the county is growing at the rate of 20,000 to 25,000 a year.

THE DRAMA.

Booth and Barrett Close a Successful Season.

The Booth Barrett troupe closed the season last night with Julius Cæsar to another splendid house. This fine drama, always attractive, proved doubly so because it afforded a fine opportunity for the two leading tragedians to assume star roles. Julius Cæsar is rarely billed, even in the great capitals where the theatres have extensive stock companies and supers, because the cast exacts at least three first-characters. "Brutus," "Cassius" and "Mark Anthony" are roles in which the highest professional talent has scope for its abilities. We should, therefore, be well satisfied that we were able to see this splendid drama played here in a manner so acceptably enacted as it was last night. The greatness of character of "Brutus," the "noblest Roman of them all," was finely exemplified by the chaste and dignified interpretation of Mr. Booth. The perfect integrity of soul and lofty spirit of the great conspirator, who killed "the foremost man of all the world, not that he loved Cæsar less but Rome more," was delineated by Mr. Booth with a calm dignity of demeanor that asserted itself in the consciousness of power which he portrayed throughout in voice, in action and in facial expression. The bloody scene in the capitol was rendered strikingly impressive by the lofty carriage of "Brutus," and the expression of anguish, mingled with the air of conscious rectitude depicted on his face when "Cæsar" fell, was a picture fit for the study of a master. There were no lack of fine touches of art in the quarrel scene with "Cassius," and when "Brutus" is brought to meet his fate at Philippi, he confronts it with that lofty spirit and calm resignation which characterized his personation at every stage in the great drama.

"Mr. Barrett's "Cassius" was also a fine rendition. Whilst it was not so evenly meritorious as that of his colleague, it was a very finished and artistic piece of acting throughout. Miss Gale's "Portia" greatly raised that lady in the estimation of the judicious. She personated the dignity of the Roman matron in a manner that added to her reputation as an actress. The rest of the company played their respective parts well. The only fault we have to find is in the way in which Mr. Buckley "spouts" the lines of "Mark Antony." He is what "Hamlet" would term a "robustious" actor, and never misses a chance to rant. Yet this sort of acting has its admirers, as was shown last night by a demonstrative portion of the audience calling him out after he had declaimed his oration in a most vehement and meretricious style.

Now, that the Booth-Barrett season is closed, we may congratulate ourselves that we have been favored with a week of legitimate drama very excellently rendered; and we may also congratulate the troupe upon the very liberal treatment they have received at the hands of the people of Los Angeles.

They open in San Francisco at the Baldwin to-morrow night.

FIRE MATTERS.

Action of the Commissioners at Yesterday's Meeting.

The Board of Fire Commissioners met yesterday afternoon in the Mayor's office. There was present a full board, viz: Hon. W. H. Workman, Mayor and Chairman, Chief of Fire Department Moriarty and Messrs. Humphreys and Teed. Bids for new fire hydrants were received as follows: Schoder, Johnson & Co. agreed to furnish from 50 to 100 hydrants at $28 each, delivered at the Southern Pacific Depot. Fosmir & Scott agreed to furnish from 50 to 200 elbow hydrants at $30.50 each.

The matter of purchasing hydrants was laid over for one week, so that other Eastern firms could send in bids.

A communication, offering a lot for an engine-house on York street, between Main street and Grand avenue, at a rental of $75 per month was read and placed on file.

Mr J. R. Millard came before the Board and stated that he had leased a lot about six months ago on the corner of Fourth and Los Angeles streets, but had been called away East by sickness in his family and consequently the building he intended putting up had been delayed. He however, had his lumber on the ground before the ordinance was passed and intended to erect a substantial three-storied house. On motion of Mr. Humphreys permission was granted him to erect his building.

A proposition from E. C. Barlingame proposing to erect a fine engine house, on Temple street and lease it to the city at a monthly rental of $60 was read, and on motion of Mr. Teed, the proposition was accepted, for two years, with the option of four years, the building to be erected under the supervision of the Chief Engineer.

A petition from W. E. Spalding and others, residents of Los Angeles, asking for more hydrants, was referred to the Chief and Commissioner Teed to make arrangements with the Mountain Water Company, and to select sites for the fixing of the hydrants.

A petition was read from Mrs. Francis E. Bridges, Downey avenue, asking for the removal of an obnoxious hydrant and to have it placed on Hellman avenue. Referred to the Chief and Mr. Teed for investigation.

Recommended that the Clerk of the Council be instructed to advertise for bids for harness for the fire department.

The action of the Chief in putting a cesspool in the East Los Angeles engine house yard was approved.

On motion the Chief was instructed to place a fire hydrant on the corner of Alameda and Marchessault streets.

The Chief was instructed to ascertain the price of buttons for firemen, and his action in purchasing two clocks for the engine houses was approved.

The following new appointments were made. Thos. Romero and J. O. Eckles to the Hook and Ladder Company; M. Moriarty and G. L. Sevey to the Park Hose Company. Extra men: Engine No. 2—J. W. Clark and Chas. Lincon. Engine No. 3—Chas. A. Gough and P. A. Mason. Engine No. 4—J. W. Judey and Otto Fritz.

The usual number of bills were audited, after which the Board adjourned.

Not Arkansas.

COLTON, Cal., March 2, '88.

DEAR SIR:—Give Arkansas justice by correcting that express robbery published in your issue of the 1st inst. The Missouri, Kansas & Texas, R. R. does not pass through any part of Arkansas. It runs through Missouri, Kansas and the Indian Territory to Texas. The nearest point this road touches Arkansas is Vinita, C. N., 75 miles from the Arkansas line.

Kansas is often taken for Arkansas. Possibly the error occurred in that way. As your paper containing the report has been sent to Arkansas, it would be but justice to correct this error. Truly yours,

ARKANSAS.

A Land-Slide in the Cajon.

The Santa Fe overland train, due yesterday morning at 7:05 o'clock, did not arrive at that hour. Meager reports reached the Superintendent in this city about a land-slide which occurred in the Cajon Pass, just this side of Summit. The report said that a large force of men had been sent out immediately to remove the earth from the tracks, which it was expected could be cleared in a few hours, probably by 6 o'clock last evening.

Not Guilty.

The HERALD attaches are under obligations to F. W. Schaumburger for a box of fine Navel oranges. The reporters have had frequent occular proof of the excellent appearance of the Anaheim exhibit but not before of the quality. A jury was at once summoned and after the evidence was all in a verdict of "Not guilty of a lack of excellence and delicious flavor" was returned.

A Cemetery Removed.

The cemetery at San Francisco is being removed from its present location to a spot on the west side of the railroad. Among the remains moved are those of the late lamented D. M. Berry. It is the intention of some of the former friends of Mr. Berry to erect a modest marble shaft to his cherished memory at an early date. The remains of Capt. Moffat have also been removed and are placed in the lot adjoining those of Mr. Berry. It was Mr. Berry's wish that he be laid to rest as near Capt. Moffat as possible.

A Fragment.

We wandered forth the flowers among—
I wayward sang this song;
"In truth, thy tender heart be wrung,
If ever Love be wrong."

We lingered, wrapt in summer bliss,
Among the roses long.
She whispered low with parting kiss:
"Ah! Love is never wrong."

BRITISH HELP.

C. White Mortimer's Reply to Mrs. Parker.

Mrs. Margaret E. Parker, The Home Lea, Penketh, Warrington, England.

MADAM—I have to-day received your letter of February 13, 1888, and observe that a copy of it was published in to-day's edition of the Los Angeles HERALD, in connection with a letter you addressed to the editor of that paper. Your letter to the editor of the HERALD contains a misleading abstract of the contents of my letter to the Liverpool Mercury of January 11th last. A casual reader would, I think, fail to see that any protest was directed against your sending "Lady helps"—using the term "Lady" in the restricted sense in which it is understood in Europe—to become domestic servants in California. Your statement that the ladies you sent here prior to January 11th have all got good situations is incorrect. I am informed that several are unemployed; that all have changed their situations more than once, and that a majority of them feel that they have been deceived. My action in protesting against your proceedings has met with the approval of at least two friends of yours here with whom you are in correspondence in this matter. Your letters and lectures have induced a number of poor ladies to come to this State, nearly all of whom are wholly unfitted to make their way here, and who now regret that they came. Yours, etc.,

C. WHITE MORTIMER.

The Corner-Stone Successfully Laid.

During the last few years the different organizations of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union have made wonderful progress all over the United States, and California has come in for a full share of the work done by the band of noble, self-sacrificing women devoted to the cause. In Los Angeles they have not been idle, and as a result of their labors they have formed a strong society numbering over 400 members. Their untiring efforts in behalf of their local organization has materialized and as a result yesterday at 2 P. M., at the corner of Fort and Temple streets, the corner-stone of a large fine structure which will cost $45,000 was laid, and dedicated to the W. C. T. U. cause. It marks an epoch in the ladies' work which will probably always be regarded as the first solid milestone in the successful progress of the Association's labor in this city.

At the hour appointed for the services a large congregation of people were gathered at the site of the building among whom were a host of merry children, representing the Band of Hope and Loyal Temperance Legion, many of them bearing banners with appropriate inscriptions. The impressive exercises were opened with a reading from the Scriptures by Mrs. Brown, the Evangelist of the Union, which was followed with prayer by Rev. Mr. Pendleton, of the Baptist Church. Mrs. Garvey then gave in outline the the history of the W. C. T. U. in Southern California, the obstacles it had to overcome, and its bright future. After Mrs. Garvey concluded a song was sung by the children who compose the Band of Hope, the Sunday-school Temperance Society, and the Loyal Temperance Union. Judge Cheney then made an eloquent address and an earnest appeal to the citizens of Los Angeles to aid, to their best ability, the good work of the noble women who compose the Women's Christian Temperance Union. He spoke of intemperance as the great source of crime, and the evil which more than all else was sapping the very life-blood from some of the best families in our midst. These noble women were attempting to purify society, and no loyal and clear-headed husband would refuse assistance.

Mrs. Otis read a poem, after which the formal ceremony of laying the corner-stone by Miss Martha Hathaway was performed. In the brown granite stone was placed a copper box containing the following articles: Annual reports of the W. C. T. U. of Southern California, list of members of the W. C. T. U., 325 names, list of members of the Sunday Schools, Temperance Brigades, Bands of Hope and Loyal Temperance Legions of Southern California, 3350 names, samples of the triple pledge used by the children, photographs of the new building, copies of the Union, Signal, Censor and Oak and Ivy Leaf, temperance papers, and copies of the Los Angeles daily papers.

Coroner's Inquest.

Coroner J. M. Meredith held an inquest, yesterday, on the body of James O'Shea, a native of Ireland, aged about 50 years, who was found dead in a closet in the rear of a saloon on the corner of First street and Santa Fé avenue.

William Tharp testified: I reside in Los Angeles, and am a saloon keeper. I have known the deceased two or three months. His name is James O'Shea. He is married, and between 50 and 60 years of age. He was working as a laborer for the Santa Fé Railroad Company. He is in the habit of frequenting my place, and has been on a spree for the last four or five days. Yesterday afternoon I had occasion to go to the closet, and found the door fast on the inside. I looked through a hole and saw the deceased sitting down near the door. I thought he was asleep, and shouted to wake him up. I then pushed the door open, and noticed he looked very pale, and apparently dead. I called to the others to come and look at him, and he was pronounced dead. I never knew him to have any difficulty with any person. Dr. I. E. Cohn made a post-mortem examination of the body, and found death had resulted from heart disease. The jury returned a verdict of death from natural causes.

New Trial Granted.

A motion was made for a new trial in the case of the People vs. Wm. Redman by Theodore Savage before Judge Gardiner yesterday morning and granted, on the grounds of insufficiency of evidence. It will be remembered that some weeks ago Redman was charged with burglary and convicted.

LABOR CHAMPIONS.

The C. B. & Q. Engineers Still Out on Strike.

THROUGH TRAFFIC SUSPENDED

An Important Conference to be Held on Monday by the Brotherhood.

[Associated Press Dispatches to the HERALD.]

CHICAGO, March 3.—The meeting on Monday, of the Chairmen of the Grievance Committees, is looked forward to with great anxiety by both the Burlington officials and the Brotherhood officers. Upon the outcome of this meeting depends the future course of Chief Arthur. Should a reasonable excuse be found for it, on any one of the Western roads, the Brotherhood men will probably be called out. It is believed by many that every Western road is liable, under a strict neutrality construction, to have its men taken off by Tuesday morning. Officers of the Brotherhood now admit that nothing satisfactory will come of their order to the engineers and firemen in the employ of the Reading road to quit work, and the dispatches received from the East this morning confirm the belief. Only about thirty Reading men were induced to go back to their homes.

A CALL ON THE COMPANY.

At the Burlington office it was not thought that the Brotherhood would carry out the threat to call off the engineers and firemen on the other roads.

"Their object," said one official, "is to endeavor to bring such pressure from the public and other roads to bear upon us that will compel us to accede to their demands. We have made no attempt to take through freight, and will not attempt to do so until we have completely mobilized our local traffic. Then we will receive and handle through freight, and should any attempt be made to cut us off from accommodation by connecting lines, we will try what virtue there is in the inter-State commerce law. We can compel other roads to handle our cars, or we may make them pay $5,000 for every car they refuse to handle. We are moving trains now almost to our usual capacity on the Iowa, Nebraska and Missouri lines, and will have our line service complete next week. The fight on other roads by the Brotherhood will be made solely on account of freight traffic."

SUBURBAN TRAFFIC UNAFFECTED.

There was no apparent change today in the passenger service of the Burlington road. The suburban trains arrived and left on time. The other trains which came in were the ones which had been running for several days. An official of the company said that the through passenger business is not as yet being solicited or received. A notice was issued this morning that the company's freight house in this city will be opened on Monday for the reception of merchandise for stations in Illinois only, and it is desired that shipments for points not reached by any other road be not delivered. The notice says: "We expect to make reasonably prompt delivery, but the time will not be as good as ordinarily."

AT THE ENGINEERS' HEADQUARTERS.

Chief Arthur and Sargent are not very hopeful of any good coming from their request to the Brotherhood on the Reading road to step out. The are confident, however, that there are not enough idle engineers in the East to materially assist the Burlington and that the road will arrive at the limits of its resources within a few days. They expressed a belief this evening that they had a whip-hand on the strike, but do not expect that there will be many developments until Monday, when the chairmen of the various grievance committees get together. To keep up the spirits of the strikers, a circular letter was sent out to-day signed by Arthur and Sargent, complimenting the men on their firm stand and devotion to the people and duty and expressing the firm belief that their cause will triumph. Mr. Arthur was this evening handed a copy of a telegram which was sent this afternoon by twelve Reading engineers to their master workman in Philadelphia, saying: "We are on our way back; stop the boys."

Grand Master Sargent showed to the Associated Press representative telegrams from many Western points, showing that the men are standing firm and are confident of ultimate victory.

ONE OF THE STRIKERS SHOT.

An Associated Press report was received this afternoon from Linnæus, Mo., stating that at Brookfield, this morning, George H. Bostwick, a Burlington railway bridge fireman, fatally shot John Roxy, a striking engineer. To avoid lynching, Bostwick was brought here, and is now under arrest. Bostwick claims that he had been sworn in as a deputy sheriff. He was in charge of the engine when Roxy and others approached the engine and endeavored to take charge of it. An altercation ensued and Roxy drew his pistol. Bostwick then shot him in self-defense.

ARTHUR HEARS OF IT.

Chief Engineer Arthur had not heard of the tragedy until shown the Associated Press despatch to-night. When it was read to him Mr. Arthur seemed affected. His eyes dropped to the floor, and after a minute's study, said: "I am sorry, deeply sorry. I deprecate violence of any sort, for there is nothing to be gained by it. The instructions given to our agents who left headquarters for outlying points, were to be particularly careful to request our men to stay away from the company's property, so that just such trouble as this would be averted. This was supplemented by a telegram of the same tenor to the Brotherhood on the Burlington system. I cannot discuss the case further, for I have received no official advice about it."

SUBSTITUTES SENT OUT.

At 4 P. M. a special train of three coaches left the Union depot, carrying westward 110 men, said to be tried engineers and firemen. They marched ever from the company's headquarters in charge of the Iowa Division Superintendent and a few Pinkerton men. The 110 will be dropped along the line between here and Council Bluffs at the places where they are needed. This last batch makes the third since Thursday noon, and gives a total of over 300 in Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska.

LATEST DEVELOPMENTS.

At Chief Arthur's headquarters to-night it was given out that on Monday morning a prominent Chicago firm, whose name is withheld, would bring suit against the Burlington Road to compel it to carry freight, or show cause why it did not. The action, it is claimed, will be brought under the Common Carrier act.

TROUBLE ON THE WABASH.

QUINCY, Illinois, March 3 —To-day the Wabash engineers refused to do switching in the Quincy yards. The Wabash men took their engines to the roundhouse and left them.

Looks Like Blackmail.

"The city of Burbank, in the Fernando Valley, on the line of the Southern Pacific Railway, not far from Los Angeles, affords a bright and shining example of the nefarious ingenuity of the land sharps. A short range of cement sidewalk, a shanty of a hotel, a few tents and, the crowning glory of inventive humbug, the alleged horse railway, comprise this delectable municipality.

The "horse railroad" consists of two rails laid on the ground in the center of the "street," with cement sidewalks at the point nearest the passing trains on the Southern Pacific Railway. On the rails stands a horse-car. The promoter of the enterprise can "point with pride" to Burbank, and assure the "tenderfoot" by letter that "we have our horse railway already under way. The first tram-car has arrived, and others will follow in time."

In refutation of the above article which appeared in the New York Tribune of February 16, 1888, the Providencia Land, Water and Development Company makes the following statement:

The town of Burbank was laid out by this company about ten months ago. It is situated about nine miles north of the city of Los Angeles, on the Southern Pacific Railway. It covers an area of about 400 acres near the center of the 17,000 acres owned by this company, and is the only townsite thereon. It is at the mouth of the San Fernando valley, which is tributary to it. The San Fernando valley contains an area of over 100,000 acres of first-class farming and fruit lands.

Over $2,000,000 have been expended in improvements at Burbank during the past ten months, the following evidences thereof being visible to the most casual observer.

The "Bu bank Villa" Hotel and furniture costing	$ 35 000.00
A two-story brick block containing 7 stores, bank office, Public Hall, &c	15,000.00
20 residences costing from $1,000 to $3,000 each. Total about	40,000 00
1 store and newspaper (Burbank Times) office	3,500 00
1 store and rooms	3,000.00
Railroad Depot and Land Company's office	2,500.00
Street railway, 1½ miles long	5,000.00
Reservoirs and water pipes laid	44,579.02
Street grading and tree planting and other improvements	46,883.96
	$195,462.98

There is in course of construction a three-story brick and stone building, 75x195, for Bryant's furniture factory, estimated cost, $40,000.

The Los Angeles County Railroad Company are under bonds to have their road running to Burbank by June 1, 1888, towards which this company pays a bonus of $20,000 in cash, besides giving right of way and land worth several thousand dollars for depots and terminal facilities.

As a further testimony of the genuine and substantial basis upon which the town of Burbank is established, the company is willing and prepared to buy back any of the town lots by it sold when the town was placed on the market, at an advance of 100 per cent of the amount paid at that time.

Electioneering in Australia.

There is ordinarily no personal canvassing at elections, the distance being commonly too vast for that practice. But there is a story current of two noted Irishmen who were candidates for a gold field, which included an agricultural settlement supposed to exercise a decisive influence in the contest. Each of them determined to make a canvass of the district. Murphy and Kelly, as it will be convenient to name them, hoped to steal a march, each on the other, and set out in the early morning. Murphy who was an indolent, solemn and imposing personage, so grandiose that one of his colleagues declared that on public occasions he constituted a procession in his own person, became quite genial and familiar, and, in the first farmyard that he reached, might be seen in a little time helping the farmer to bail up the cows for milking. After such a stroke of condescension and good-fellowship he assumed that his cause was won, and asked triumphantly, if they had heard anything of his rival in the district. "Oh, dear, yes," said the farmer; "Mr. Kelly is a nice gentleman. He's helping the mistress just now, in the other farm, feeding the calves." —[Contemporary Review.

THE NATIONAL GAME.

New Rules Framed at the League Meeting at New York.

NEW YORK, March 3.—This evening the meeting of the National Baseball League concluded. The Board of Arbitration finished its work at 3:30 o'clock. The Kansas City club question is left undecided. A revision of the rules is announced as follows:

In the rules on base-running a new section is added, which reads as follows: In Rule 4 a column shall tie a score of bases stolen, and shall be governed as follows: An attempt to steal a base must go to the credit of the base-runner whether the ball is thrown wild or muffed by the fielder, but any manifest error is to be charged to the fielder making the same. If the base-runner advances another base he shall not be credited with the stolen base, and the fielder allowed such advancement is also to be charged with an error. If the base-runner makes a start and a battery error is made, the runner receives the credit of the stolen base, and the error is scored against the player making it. Should a base-runner overrun a base and then be put out, he should receive credit for the stolen base, under the head of base-hits.

In Rule 66, Section No. 7 was inserted to read that the number of men struck out shall be included in the summary.

The last change was an addition to Section 3, Rule 22, as follows:

After the first inning the striker in each inning shall be the batsman whose name follows that last man who has completed his turn at the bat in the preceding inning.

SCHEDULE CHANGES.

The only changes made in the report of the Schedule Committee were to appease the demands and ease the kicking of Chicago. The Detroits' dates in June were changed for the Chicagos at Boston and New York, the Detroits' dates at Boston and New York being counterchanged.

AN OLD FAKE

Ventilated to a Conductor by a Young Man With a Red Mustache.

"Can anybody change a five-dollar gold piece?"

As a Third-avenue conductor made this inquiry the other night a brawny passenger stood beside him waiting the reply. Nobody could change the piece, and the passenger said: "All right, give it to me; I'll get out and get it changed and take the next car."

"Don't get off," said a red-mustached young man in glasses, "let me lend you five cents."

"But you don't know me. No, I'll get off; I haven't far to go."

"Nonsense," said the red-mustached young man. "Sit down; there; I've paid your fare."

"Well, I am ever so much obliged to you."

"Don't speak of it; I've been in that fix myself."

"Delicate situation?"

"Yes, but likely to happen to anyone. This is bad weather for getting off and on cars."

Then the two conversed amicably till he who had been obliged rose and left the car, with an adieu and renewed thanks.

"I'll bet that fellow has more dimes and nickels in his pockets than I have," said the red-mustached young man to the conductor.

"What? No!" said the latter.

"Yes; that's an old fake. His five-dollar piece is counterfeit, and he wanted to work it on you or some of the passengers."—[New York Telegram.

WHAT ARE ORNAMENTS?

A Decision of the Supreme Court Defining Them.

Mrs. Elizabeth E. D. Taylor, recently deceased, left an estate valued at about $155,000. Among other bequests named in her will was the following: "To my niece, Louise E. Matthews of this city, I give $10,000, my piano, sewing machine, fingerrings (save the diamond ring which I habitually wear) as she shall choose to take." The Probate Court ordered a partial distribution of the estate, including the personal property bequeathed to Louise E. Matthews (now Louise M. Overacher). Elizabeth H. Liddall, heir-at-law, appealed from the order on the ground that the personal property so distributed was not intended by the testatrix to be bequeathed to Louise. The question turned upon the point whether the Court below erred in holding that the things distributed were "ornaments" within the meaning of that word as used in the will. These things consisted of breastpins, bracelets, earrings, lacepins, sleeve-buttons, glove-buttons, brooches, lockets, chains, etc., made of jewels and gold, such as women usually wear for personal decoration. "In Webster's Dictionary," says the Court, "an illustration is given from Sir Thomas Browne, as follows: 'Some think it most ornamental to wear their bracelets on their wrists; others, about their ankles; and the Jenkens of the present day, in his description of the costumes of ladies at evening parties, writes, ornaments, diamonds.'"

The Court concludes that the view taken by the Judge of the Court below is more satisfactory than the opposite view taken by the appellant, and, therefore, affirmed the judgment and order.

Silver Marks.

The King's head was first used as one of the hall marks on English silver in 1784. The story is that George III having attended a dinner at Goldsmith's Hall, was greatly impressed with the rich display of plate used on that occasion. His Majesty was in need of money, it being just after the close of the American War, and the idea was suggested that silver plate was a good article for taxation. Soon after the Duty Act was passed, which imposed a tax of six pence per ounce on all silver made in England, and also enacted that the additional stamp of the King's head or duty mark should be placed on all articles as an evidence that the duty had been paid. The soverign's head is the fifth mark, therefore any piece of English silver with only four marks is certainly over a hundred years old. There are many fine specimens of the earlier period owned in Boston.—[Boston Transcript.

Names of your spirit friends as they appear given in full, with relationship and incidents, giving positive proof of spirit return. BEE FARMING.

How It is Done in South California.

MR. FRED. L. ALLES' VIEWS.

A Great and Paying Industry. Little Capital and Labor Required.

Throughout Southern California, for a distance of 300 miles, the Coast range of mountains is spotted with little cañons, upon whose sides may be found a hundred varieties of wild flowers. Here and there rises an occasional live-oak, or a clump of low growing pines. The body of this living carpet, covering the acclivity on the Temescal range, the San Jacinto mountains and the lower edges of the Sierra Madres, is composed of all the colors of the rainbow and varies with the month and the seasons, while heaps of gray old boulders, jutting clumps of sandstone and granite, and masses of chapparal, grease-wood and mesquite, with their neutral tints, give the eye relief from the too brilliant color surrounding them.

These cañons are the sources of the water supply for the valley vineyards and orchards, and are the homes of the bee-masters of a land literally flowing with honey. The irrepressible conflict between fruit-grower and apiarist has ended in the latter fleeing to the mountains, taking the little busy bees to gather the nectar from the delicious mountain flowers. The orchardist charged that the bees punctured the ripening fruit with their lancet tongues, and while the bee-master knew this to be an error he had no choice but to go among the hills, where fruit growing is not yet a leading industry.

Bee farming in California bears little resemblance to the same industry elsewhere, on account of the novel difference in the seasons. Instead of making provision for long and cold winters the bees are able here to gather nectar from New Year's Day to Christmas, and the bee-master takes out honey during eight months of the year. During January, February and March the orange and lemon trees of the valley orchards and the wild acacia and eucalyptus (Australian blue-gum) are all in bloom, and furnish a fair quantity of nectar, but the larger part of this is consumed by the bees, and it is not the custom to take this from the hives. The so-called "orange-blossom honey" sometimes seen on the market, is not made from orange blossom nectar at all, and is so labeled with intent to deceive.

Early in February the native sheep-grass, alfilerilla, furnishes an abundance of bloom, which makes a good honey of amber color, but not so good as that made from the black sage, which blossoms later in the same month. This sage grows in the lowest valleys and on the sides of the mountain ranges in all parts of California, and is the best plant for bees, because its nectar gives them heart and vitality at a season when they most need it. The honey made from it is of a fine color and strong body.

Early in June appears the best of all honey-producing plants—the white and silver sages. No flower in the world produces a clearer, white, pure nectar than California silver sage. Eastern white clover and basswood (American linden) are splendid honey-producers, but both are inferior to the silver sage in making an article of delicious flavor, good body, and clear as pure water. These sages bloom usually during the entire month of June, and then comes the wild buckwheat, which has a blossom resembling the cultivated plant, and furnishes a honey of good quality and rich amber color.

Early in July the wild alfalfa appears and soon after the wild sumac opens its large clusters of creamy flowers, and both are exceedingly rich in a delicious nectar. The wild mignonette is in bloom during the same period, and the bees never seem to tire of hovering over its perfumed flowers, during their short period of bloom.

The golden-rod throws up its brilliant yellow flower spikes in July and August and continues in blossom until Christmas. It is similar to the plant of the same name growing in the Eastern States, and is one of the most valuable of California's long list of honey producing plants.

The list includes nearly two hundred plants, but many of them bloom for only a short period, every fortnight showing a new combination of colors on the hillsides. The nectar gathered from all the different flowers is not separated by the bee-master. The aim is only to keep the light, silver sage honey apart from that of darker color made earlier in the season from the alfilerilla and black sage, and afterwards again from the amber honey of the wild buckwheat, sumac and golden rod.

The process of preventing the mixing of the honey by the bees is very simple, the bee-master watching the season of the different flavors and taking the honey from the combs as the season progresses.

In February, "swarming" begins in this warm climate, and continues until August. This is simply the old queen leaving the hive with her bees to the younger brood and queen hatched during the few months previous. When the young bees are old enough to take care of themselves, and the old queen finds she has a rival, she leaves the hive followed by all of her colony and alights on any low-growing bush or other object that may be near. The bees cluster around her in a mass, and the bee-master, on the alert for "swarms," removes the hive just vacated to a new stand, takes another hive, previously filled by him with empty comb-frames, but having a partly filled comb of unsealed honey in the center, and places this on the old stand. The simplest method then of removing the "swarm" to the new hive, is to sprinkle their wings lightly with water, so they cannot fly, shake them gently off their resting place into a large-mouthed vessel, cover with a cloth, carry them to the new hive and empty them all in. Finding their queen with them and plenty of empty worker comb, the bees will nearly always accept their new quarters and go to work.

If there are two young queens in the hive just located, as sometimes happens, one of them must be removed, or the bees will kill one and possibly both.

The commonest form of handling honey now is to produce what is known as strained honey, though it is really not strained at all. The old method of crushing the comb and then pressing the mixture through a sieve and cloth, to remove impurities and particles of wax, has been abandoned. An extractor is now in use, consisting ordinarily, of a sheet iron tank the size of a half barrel. In this are six or eight light iron frames, so arranged that each will hold a comb of honey and attached to a common center. This is operated by a handle in the same fashion as a coffee mill is turned, and the swift motion of the wire frames throws the honey out of the cells by centrifugal force against the inner sides of the extractor, whence it runs to the bottom and is drawn off by a faucet.

The comb frames used are not all of the same size. When comb honey is wanted for the market a small frame is used, one holding about a pound of honey being preferred. When it is intended to extract the honey a long frame is used, as this can be handled just as easily as one holding much less honey.

The ingenuity of man has not yet devised an an artificial comb that the bee will fill, though a piece of wax is always fastened to the new frame to be filled with comb honey, thus assisting the bees in starting. As more time is spent by the bees in making the comb than in filling it, there is great economy in extracting the honey, for the same comb can be refilled every ten days by a strong colony during the best blooming season, and it will last for many years.

California liquid honey, as it leaves the bee-master, is always pure. Sugar, glucose, and all other possible adulterations, cost more per pound than the pure honey is worth on the ranch.

During a single year California will send to market more than 2,000,000 pounds of honey, and much of this goes to Europe. It returns to the apiarist from 2½ to 3 cents a pound for liquid honey, and from 7 to 8 cents a pound for comb honey. These prices seem very low, but the capital and labor invested are relatively small. A good swarm of bees, including the hive, can be bought from $6 to $7 and in a good season a single swarm of bees will make from 500 to 700 pounds of liquid honey. This is worth $12 to $15, and a single apiary often contains 200 stands of bees.

Thirty years ago a swarm of bees could be sold in Southern California for $100, and good comb honey was retailed at $1 a pound in Los Angeles.

Very much of the work on a bee ranch can be done by a smart boy or girl, and would include extracting the honey, filling the cans, putting on labels, cutting comb honey for placing in glass jars, making the frames and putting comb foundation on the frames, and much other light work of this character; but the watchful eye and steady hand of the bee-master or bee-mistress would be necessary in hiving the swarms, in looking for foul brood and moths, and examining into the condition of the worker bees and drones,—[Fred L. Alles in Riverside Press.

CHINESE GAMBLERS

Captured by the Police Yesterday Morning.

During the past few weeks a great deal has been said about the Chinese gambling games being allowed to run unmolested. Such is not the case, however, for the officers have tried over and over again to gain an entrance into the gambling haunts of the heathen, but up to yesterday without success.

Sergeant Loomis disguised Officers Van Luven and Boland in true Chinese costume, queue and all complete, and these two, for the nonce Mongolians, meandered round Chinatown all yesterday morning without exciting suspicion. They finally walked into a gambling house and separated at the top of the stairs, one entering one room and the other the other, and found themselves in the midst of an excited crowd of Chinamen, each intent on the tan-game that was going on. The officers for a time watched the game in silence, and then, drawing their revolvers ordered the game to stop and seized the money that was strewn on the table. The whole outfit of both games was captured and twenty-seven gamblers were escorted to the police station by Sergeant Loomis and Officer Bosqui, who were on hand shortly after the officers entered the house. The dealers of the game deposited $200 each and the remainder $50 each for their appearance before Justice Austin at a future date.

Notes and Personals.

Mr. H. Silver, Treasurer of the Santa Fe system, is in the city.

The Southern Pacific Company sent another orange special East last night.

Mr. Joe. Thompson, Trainmaster of the Southern Pacific Company, went to Colton yesterday.

Dr. J. J. Ranson, Surgeon-General of the A., T. & S. F. System, goes to San Francisco to-day.

The heavy rains have not yet done the railroads any serious damage and none is now anticipated.

The Booth and Barrett company left for San Francisco last night on No. 20, which was held especially to accommodate them.

Colonel J. H. Wallace, Division Roadmaster of the Southern Pacific Company, made a flying trip to Pomona yesterday on business.

The Southern Pacific officials are busily at work upon a new time-table, that will permit the running of through trains to Santa Barbara without making the change at Saugas.

Train No. 17 from San Francisco yesterday morning owing to heavy running was one hour late in arriving in this city. No. 19, due at 5 P. M., was on time. No. 20, due at 9:30 P. M. from El Paso, was two hours late.

Mr. J. W. Adams, the genial Traveling Passenger Agent of the Chicago and Alton Railway, with headquarters in this city, left last night for a two weeks' visit to the City of Mexico. Mr. Adams is one of the most successful railroad men in this part of the country, and will largely add to the business of his road by his affability.

LOCAL EVENTS.

The Citrus Fair at Armory Hall.

POSTOFFICE BUSINESS.

Other Matters Which Were of Interest to the Public Yesterday.

Yesterday was the first day the elements have favored the Citrus Fair. The managers were on the point of concluding that they had removed the exhibit during an unfavorable moon change, but their superstitions were entirely dispelled by the large number of visitors who thronged the hall all day and evening yesterday. The numerous exhibitors who, during several of the days in the past week, spent most of the time in the ante-rooms sampling oranges in company with reporters anxious to write up the great fruit fair, were obliged to report on duty all day. Many of them were sighing for rest early in the evening when the largest crowds were promenading up and down the aisles plying every one who looked as if he owned an orange tree with numerous questions. Many of the booths were retouched with fresh flowers and otherwise beautified. Anaheim had added a number of beautiful boquets and the entire booth bordered with three varieties of acacia blossoms. A fine lot of ostrich feathers were secured from the Southern California Ostrich Farm by express, and were an attractive feature. By actual measurement it was found that a seedling orange in this exhibit is the largest in the fair by at least 5-14ths of an inch. Persons desiring to receive information from Mr. Schaumburger, who serves faithfully as manager in charge, were obliged to await their turn, postoffice style, Matthew Gage of Riverside, refreshed his large and fine exhibit by an addition of choice flowers. Heartsease enjoys the same serene peace and quiet and retains the same violet fragrance that has been characteristic heretofore. The beautiful display of tropical and semi-tropical plants from Louis J. Stengle's Exotic Gardens have been admired by every visitor. Too much cannot be said of them. General John C. Fremont and wife visited the hall yesterday and expressed themselves as exceedingly pleased with the fair.

A number of Eastern tourists were heard to remark upon passing out that a visit here was worth a trip across the continent.

The fair will be open to visitors today from 2 P. M. until 10 P. M.

ABOUT OVER.

Such is the Case with the A. & P. Strike.

From messages received in this city yesterday it would seem that the strike of the brakemen upon the Atlantic and Pacific was over. Early yesterday morning Mr. W. Dunn received a dispatch from Santa Ana, which stated that the agent there had received orders to receive perishable freight for points on and beyond the Atlantic and Pacific system. At a late hour yesterday afternoon Mr. Dunn received a dispatch from Superintendent A. M. Beal, of the A. and P. at The Needles, which said that the company was now in a condition to receive and handle all freight as formerly, and that perishable goods would be taken without fear of loss by delay. The dispatch did not state how the matter had been settled, and no idea of how the trouble now stands could be gained in the city. Mr. Dunn says that the company has not yet felt the effects of the strike, except in a very small degree. There was not the slightest sign of discontent among the employes of the road here. The Southern Pacific Company received several car loads of oranges from the Santa Fé Company yesterday before the order to receive perishable freight came in, and this was about all that the company did for the Santa Fé.

Canadian Society.

At a largely attended meeting of the Canadian Society held last evening the following officers were elected: Hon. J. D. McLead, President; Mr. D. B. McQuarrie, First Vice-President; Mr. F. T. Howland, Second Vice-President; Mr. H. V. Couter, Receiving Secretary and Treasurer; Mr. M. W. Meagher, Corresponding Secretary and Lecturer; Mr. L. Thome, Marshal. The next meeting of this Society will be held on Monday evening, March 12th, at room 75, No. 36 S. Main street. This Society is composed of Canadians, former residents of Canada or decendants of such and includes among its members a number of old residents of Los Angeles. It will no doubt do its share in making it pleasant for Canadians who may come to this city.

Coal Oil Explosion.

Yesterday morning about 10 o'clock an explosion took place at the house of Mr. Reichert, 539 Beaudry avenue. The colored servant girl, in order to get the stove fire lighted readily, poured a quantity of coal oil into the fire grate, replaced the covering of the stove and applied a match. Immediately a loud explosion followed, the lids of the stove, the stove-pipe and the colored girl were indiscriminately mixed together for a short time and the room filled with soot. However, when things had settled a little it was discovered that no serious damage was done, save to the stove, and it is hoped that it will prove a lesson to the girl in the future.

THE DRAMA.

Interesting Notes from Far and Near.

NEW PLAYS AND NEW MUSIC.

What is Being Done on the Stage — Gossip About Actors.

Clara Morris addresses her husband as "Fanny."

Fred Marden is writing a play for "little" Corinne.

Mrs. James Brown Potter is anxious to present Anthony and Cleopatra.

Frank Sanger has purchased from Edward Coleman the latter's play, Diana.

Dion Boucicault's new play, Cushla-ma-chree, has failed to enthuse the Bostonians.

Charles A. Mestayer has secured the rights to Jonn Brougham's Lottery of Life, and will play it in the chief theaters.

Herr Daniel Bandmann will soon be seen in his own version of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, which he proposes to take on the road.

Maurice Strakosch has discovered a sixteen-year-old prima donna who has been singing with great success at Vienna. Her name is Miss Nikita.

Sir Arthur Sullivan is said to be again very sick, due entirely to overexertion. His new opera on the Wild West and Buffalo Bill craze is nearing completion.

"The Humming Bird" is on its way to the Atlantic coast, and will appear for the third time this season in New York. They played this week to immense audiences at Pillsbury, Pa.

Mr. James Owen O'Connor is to appear for a week at the Star Theatre in New York as "Shylock." As he proposes to play the part with a German dialect, the performance will be unique.

A cable from Paris received Wednesday says Victor Maurel will sail for New York on April 7th for a tour of Verdi's new opera, "Othello," in New York, Boston, and Philadelphia. M. Maurel is to receive a salary of $20,000 a month during the tour.

For want of patronage, and unable to cope with the Academie Nationale de Musique, The Chatelet and Gaiete theaters, the well-known Eden Theater, Paris, has closed as a Ballet Home and opened as a Refuge d'Operette, with La Fille de Madame Angot as a spectacular play.

Rumor has it that Mr. Hoffmann, father of the little prodigy Josef has accepted an offer of $50,000 from a syndicate of New Yorkers to complete the boy's musical education. Meanwhile Josef has refused to lay any more golden eggs for Manager Abbey, and Mr. Abbey in return promises to bring suit.

Mrs. Mary Hewins Fiske (The Giddy Gusher) has written a play for Joseph Haworth. Mrs. Fiske is one of the cleverest of the many women who make a good living by their pen, and her play is sure to be not alone original but brilliant. Those who have heard it read say it is full of startling situations and sure to make a sensation.

Abbey, Schoeffel and Grau will control next season the following attractions: Mrs. James Brown Potter, Jane Hading, Mary Anderson, Monsieur Coquelin, Sarah Bernhardt, Josef Hoffmann, the Star theater, New York; the Park theater, Boston; possibly the Meininger Company, and Wallack's theater, New York, which will become a combination house.

Mrs. Langtry declares that she will not be seen as the wicked "Lena," in As in a Looking-Glass, because she is not in sympathy with the part. The Lily's sympathy has nothing to do with it. She has been making money with the play, but Charles Coghlan, who becomes her leading man as soon as Barrymore has gone, declines to play the part of "Jack Fortinbras." The opinion is that "Lena Despard" suits Mrs. Langtry exactly.

Mr. Henry E. Abbey says he has a contract with Mrs. James Brown Potter from March 19th and one for the whole of next season. Mr. Milner says he doesn't care a snap what Mrs. Potter does after March 19th, but that he has a contract with her for next season, at a salary of $400 a week, and one-third of the benefits in addition. Both managers promise to make things exceedingly warm for the other.

M. Henri Meilhac, author of "Frou-Frou," "La Belle Helene," "La Grande Duchesse," and ever so many more good things, says that the height of his ambition will not be reached until he has written a "Comedie de mœurs Americaines," and for that purpose he proposes visiting the United States, in order to draw his characters from life, "as seen with his own eyes," and not from hearsay, etc., as was the case with M. Victorien Sardou when he wrote "Uncle Sam" far more English than American.

Ten years ago M. Julien Dallieves left with the janitor of the Theatre Francaise the MS. of a play in verse, called the Mission de Jeaune d'Arc, and a few days after was drowned while boating. Last week, while looking over some old papers, the play was found, and curiousity leading Manager Clarette, he read the drama, with the result that it will shortly be put into rehearsal; several of the Societaires of the Comedy Francaise proclaiming it to be a masterpiece.

Edward E Rice will introduce a new and novel idea into his traveling organization next season, consisting of a special hatter included in each company. This he finds necessary, from the fact that it is impossible to keep any one sized hat, either for street or stage wear, that will fit the principal comedian at all times. He states positively that a pronounced individual hit in any one city where his companies play a week or more, will increase the circumference of an ordinary head from 6½ to 7¾.

The Mystery of a Hansom Cab was produced at the Princess's Theatre in London, on Washington's birthday and manager W. W. Kelly telegraphs that is was well received. The leading rôles were undertook by Miss Grace Hawthone and Mr. James Fernandez, supported by Messrs J. Barnes, W. L. Abingdon, F. B. Dawson, Bassett-Rose, H. de Solla, Misses Drummond, Bertie Willis, Eva Sothern, C. Richards and Mrs. Huntley. A new first piece, written for the occasion by a lady member of the Princess's Theater, and called Philanthropy, was played first.

The theme of old John Brown's blow at slavery and his execution at Harper's Ferry has been handled by Whittier and others in poetry and by George Alfred Townsend in romance, but the tragedy of the old slave days has never been placed on the stage. It is likely that a play written by Mr. W. T. Price, entitled simply Old John Brown, will be seen in the course of a little while. Mr. Price devoted a year of uninterrupted work to his task, and, as a Southern man, has produced, it is said, a drama faithful to the negro character, and in sympathy alike with the slave, the master, and the would-be liberator.

The Comédie Francaise receipts in 1886 were 2,302,000 francs, and in the first half of 1887, 1,122,000 francs. The staff consists of twenty-seven sociétaires and thirty-three pensionnaires, their salaries amounting to 423,000 francs. Twelve of the former have 12,000 francs each, half of which, however, has to be paid into the superannuation fund. The salaries of the pensionnaires range from 12,000 francs (Madame Agar) to 2,000 francs. M. Got also receives an extra salary of 6,000 francs for his forty-six years services. The spectators in 1886 numbered 307,000 who paid, and 156,000 who were admitted gratuitously.

"My Geraldine."

To-morrow evening the My Geraldine company will commence an engagement at the Grand Opera House. When Bartley Campbell wrote My Geraldine it was his ambition to clearly depict the life in Ireland, as our imagination can paint it. He wished to impress on the eye the very sensation which a sight of the mouldering ruins of many of an almost forgotten place of prayer and worship convey to the traveler through the' 'green isle of the sea." A long journey through Ireland's moss-covered hills had perfected his ideas, and he laid the strongest act of his play in the Grey Nun's abbey, a place full of historic interest, which stands on a high bluff overlooking the sea, in one of the northern counties. At the time of Mr. Campbell's visit to this ancient spot, he himself made a sketch of the interior of the abbey, and with each succeeding presentation of the play the artist has been requested to reproduce the drawing for use in the scenic effects Nor was a drawing for the scenery the only foundation for the play which Mr. Campbell brought away with him. From a tale told him by a peasant lad he gleaned the main facts for the foundation of his romance, and by the deft work of a perfect playwright he wove them into shape.

My Geraldine stands to-day a pure and simple Irish drama, appealing to every heart by its touches of sentiment and amusing all by its unrestrained vein of comedy. An Irish drama without singing or dancing would be entirely out of the question, for an Irish lad finds food and drink in both. Appropriate and catching melodies have been introduced into the several acts of the play, and together with the drama itself they have become exceedingly popular.

Mrs. Dion Boucicault (Agnes Robertson) has so long been identified with the Irish drama that it seems perfectly natural to see her name in connection with My Geraldine. That same halo of perfection hovers about her which characterizes her original performance of "Eiley O'Connor," "Arrah" and others of this class as we have seen her do them.

Poor Bartley Campbell's days of authorship are passed and a maniac's cell now confines the brain that has done more than any other to elevate the American drama, but his plays still live, and My Geraldine may be classed as one of his best.

Booth and Barrett.

The preliminary sale of seats for the first two weeks of the Booth and Barrett season at the Baldwin Theater yesterday was a success, the net proceeds of the day being $12,000, and had it not stormed as it did the sum of $20,000 would surely have been taken in at the box-office window. When the office window opened at 9 o'clock in the morning a line of purchasers, including many ladies, extended from the entrance to midway the corner of Ellis street, and notwithstanding the heavy downpour of rain, which lasted all morning and into the afternoon, the ladies undauntedly kept their places and bided their time when chance would permit them to grasp the coveted tickets All indications show that the season will prove one of the successes in theatrical annals of this city.—[San Francisco Call.

The company left this city after the performance last evening on its special car, and will reach San Francisco some time during the coming evening. The engagement here was one of the most successful ever played, and the aggregate of the business was considerably over $20,000.

The Pyke Opera Company.

The following is the cast that will appear at the Pavilion to-morrow night in Johann Strauss' latest opera A Night in Venice.

Duke Urbino.....C. M. Pyke.
Pappacacoda, a maccaroni cook, ...J. S. Greensfelder.
Camanello, Court barber..Louis F. DeLange.
Enrico, an Italian Nobleman .....Frank Valerga.
Delacqua.....
Barbaruci.....{ Three Senators. } Ed. Pyke
Testacio.....
Balbi, servant of the Duke .....H. Love.
Fisher.....Charles Colby.
Anina, an Italian fisher-maid.....Louise Manfred.
Ciboletta, sweetheart of Pappacoda, ...Jeannie Winston.
Agricola, wife of Barbaruci.....Genevieve Reynolds.
Barbara, ward of Delacqua..Hattie Atkinson.
Centurio, page to Duke ....Jennie Bageard.
Constantine, wife of Testacio.....Eva Norman.

From the list of names it will be seen that an excellent performance may be looked forward to. Certainly few operatic organizations have ever appeared in this city with such an array of celebrities in its ranks—Jeannie Winston, Louise Manfred, Genevieve Reynolds, Louis De Lange, C. M. Pyke and Joseph Greensfelder, are each a host in him (or her) self. This array of artists has the assistance of a chorus, both intrinsically, numerically and musically the equal of any that has been seen here. While pretty, the members thereof have been selected more for their ability than tor their beauty. The costumes are of the most elaborate and expensive description, and the scenery, while not magnificent, is correct and of a sufficient quantity to relieve the public of the monotony of seeing the usual local stock. The orchestra will be a special feature. The company carries its own orchestra, and to this will be added the one now in use at the Pavilion, the combination making the strongest musical union ever heard in light opera in Los Angeles. From the way in which seats were selling at McLain & Lehman's the outlook for a prosperous engagement is brilliant.

SPORTING.

Interesting Discussion of Various Pastimes.

RUNNING AND RACING EVENTS.

The Turf, Pugilism, Cricket and Other Amusements for the People.

What is a sprinter? I hear there are many opinions as to the right answer to this question, and I am deeply grieved that my general confrére of the Tribune should differ from me in my estimation of the correct one. Dagworth pities my ignorance in daring to compare Hutchens and Bethune at 220 yards, arguing that Bethune being a sprinter pure and simple, it would be folly to expect him to beat a man like Hutchens at anything over 150 yards. Now what is Bethune's best record for the 100 yards? Is it not 9 4-5 seconds, made at the Olympic games on Washington's Birthday? But Hutchens at Powderhall Grounds, Edinboro, Scotland, ran 300 yards in exactly 30 seconds. If we analyse the time and distance of these performances we find that Hutchens ran three times the distance covered by Bethune at a rate of speed only two yards in the hundred slower time. If this is not sprinting I should very much like Dagworth or some other authority learned on the subject, to explain to me what is. Any man who can run a given distance in even time, that is at a rate of speed equivalent to 100 yards in 10 seconds, is a sprinter and a very good one at that and a person who argues that 220 yards is not a sprinter's distance, displays his ignorance of pedestrianism in general and sprint running in particular. Every runner has his own fancy distance, at which he either is, or considers himself better than at another, but a good man at 100 yards deteriorates very little in speed from that distance up to 250 yards.

Cricket.

I am getting rather weary of reminding the Los Angeles Cricket Club, or rather the committee of that institution, that it is time they were bestirring themselves. The rainy season will soon be over, and as yet no arrangements have been made to secure a ground for practice. I am afraid they will find one difficult to obtain, as the Sixth-street grounds seem to have changed into a hay market—at any rate, the last time I was there a considerable quantity of that useful article was stacked upon them. I fancy that cricket, as a game for gentlemen, played by gentlemen, can hardly fail to take in Southern California, if only properly cared for, and after the brilliant commencement of last season it were a pity to let it die out amongst us.

The Turf.

The thirty-mile three-cornered contest is exciting more interest among the sporting public of Los Angeles than any event that has ever taken place. There is little to wonder at in this, when one looks into the conditions of the race. The purse—$750—is of itself well worth winning, and when is added to this the gate money, which will no doubt amount to a large sum, and the honor and glory to the successful rider, one can hardly wonder that each contestant is exerting himself to the utmost to carry off the laurels.

Each rider has a fine string of horses, and it would be invidious for me to draw comparisons between them, so evenly are they matched. In order that the public may be equally well informed on the subject, I hope to be able to place before them in the columns of the HERALD of Wednesday next, the day before the one appointed for the race, a list of the horses to be ridden by each rider, with their performances, merits and points. Mr. F. J. Francis, the energetic and able manager of the race, has done everything in his power to make it a success, and it is owing to his courtesy that I shall be in a position to keep the public informed of the progress of the riders and their steeds up to the day of the race.

There is one point, the adopting of which I rather strongly urged, and with which Messrs. Rodman & Co., the official pool-sellers on the event, readily agreed, that will convince the public of the bona-fide character of the contest. It is, that before a pool is sold on the event, the horses to be ridden by each contestant shall parade before the grand stand, so that the spectators can judge for themselves not merely of the abilities of the riders but of the animals to be ridden. It will be remembered that in the late contest between Pugh and Anderson, considerable dissatisfaction was expressed that the horses were not paraded till some two hours had been spent by the gentleman in the pool box; but with gentlemen of Messrs. Rodman & Co.'s standing such action is impossible, and would not for a moment be tolerated.

Many of the horses which were fancied for the Suburban when the weights first appeared have been eliminated from the contest, and accordingly the odds against some of those left in have been considerably reduced. Kingston, as I predicted in my last article, still keeps the pride of place as favorite, a place to which his performances just entitle him. To those who back their fancy I would merely suggest that a trifle put on Laggard to win and place would not be thrown away; but I would remind any gentleman who follows my tips that an action to recover the money lost on them is a fruitless labor, as several scrolls in Chinese hieroglyphics, testify to my total want of means to satisfy claims of such a nature

Amongst the many bets laid by Messrs. Rodman & Co. the following are of sufficient magnitude to show the state of the market:

2000 to 100 Kingston, 1200 to 40 Laggard, 1500 to 50 Linden, 6000 to 100 Oriflamme, 2000 to 40 Sir Dixon and 1000 to 10 Terra Cotta. Sir Dixon has been scratched, so his backer, who, by the way, is a Philadelphia bookmaker, was a little previous in investing on his chance.

Patsy Duffy, the well-known and accomplished jockey, is at present in this city, and intends to enjoy our climate for a limited period. Duffy's greatest success was with Tyrant, when on that horse he won the Withers stakes of 1884. His present weight is about 118 pounds, but he can easily reduce to 110 pounds, his proper riding weight. Arrangements are pending which will probably result in Duffy being engaged as first jockey to Senator Hearst for the coming season. I am not at liberty to mention the salary he is to receive, but it is such as to make even a Boston baseball crack turn green with envy.

The sale of Arrow is an event in the turf history of Los Angeles, and while he will be sadly missed by his many admirers, his advent in the East will be a further proof of the superiority of California blooded stock. I understood that the price paid for him by Mr. Schulz was $15,000, but if I am to believe a well-informed friend, it considerably exceeded that amount.

The Ring.

The first scene in the farce shortly to be enacted before a somewhat skeptical public, and programmed by those consummate actors, Messrs. Henry Bull and Pony Moore, respectively the backers of John Lawrence Sullivan, and Charles Mitchell, occurred at Chelsea Police Court on Wednesday last, when Charles Mitchell was bound over to keep the peace, on information laid that he intended to break it by meeting Sullivan in the prize ring. Now, for my own part, I do not think that there was any real need of binding Mitchell over to keep the peace. There is no greater admirer than myself of a good, manly fistic encounter, but I have little faith in men professing their eagerness to meet some one twenty pounds heavier than themselves, hoping thereby to gain a certain amount of glory and then taking every opportunity of avoiding a thrashing. I am not an admirer of John L. Sullivan, indeed I consider him an overrated fighter, but I am perfectly satisfied that Mitchell has no chance with him, as he is out of his class. Mitchell is a clever fighter, but he is not big enough for Sullivan, and should they ever meet, which I beg leave to doubt, he will prove a comparatively easy prey to the Boston bruiser.

GOBELINS.

NOT HOBGOBLINS OR BOGLES, FAMILIAR DEMONS OF POPULAR superstition, but the artistic shade, beautiful in the extreme, the craze of the season. The word gobelin is derived from the peculiar thread textures found in the tapestry weavings of Jean Gobelin, in the beginning of the 17th century. As the word is understood now, it means simply a shade. We have, in dress goods, gobelin gray, gobelin blue, gobelin green, the new shade intensifying the color, almost after the manner of the French illuminating tints. A few words relating to the styles of the present season will possibly nor be out of place. The colored gros-grain silk has gone, probably for the next decade, the faille Francaise taking its place, presenting quite a pleasing substitute. The preeminent shades will be gobelin blue, green, gray, cream, tan, silver brown and golden-bronze. There will be a great demand for rhadames, the shades being about the same as the faille. The latest in dress goods is the Vienna cloth, entirely new, and in illuminating shades; soft as camellette, and finished similar to the finest French broadcloth, although in summer weight. Plain goods will be made full, without combining with fancy materials, although fancy striped plaids and broken plaids will be very much worn. The latest goods can be found at

Cannot be told, at first sight, from tricot suitings; but a close inspection will disclose a more uneven finish, very pleasing to the eye, and very stylish. The chief objection to tricot in warm weather is its weight, which cannot be said of Biarritz Cords, which are summer goods. STOCK EXCHANGE REVIEW.

NEW YORK, March 3.—The stock market was fairly active to-day but was again weak and declining throughout most of the session and the lowest prices of the week were reached in many cases. The first sales were made at advances over last night's closing figures extending to ½ per cent. but the advantage was not retained, the decline being shortly after the opening and continued with but little interruption throughout the morning. The close was quiet and generally weak at or near the lowest prices of the day.

The Centennial Exhibition elicited the fact that American watches were superior to those from other nations; not excepting the world-renowned Swiss watches, which for cheapness and durability have been noted from time immemorial; but unless cleaned once a year the best watch will not last half its days. How much more necessary to attend to the delicate machinery of the human frame. Everybody, old and young, should take Frese's Hamburg Tea at least once a month, and those who adopt this plan will never regret following our recommendation.

BURBANK!

FIRST GRAND

EXCURSION!

Will leave the Commercial St. Depot at 10:30 a. m,

FRIDAY, MARCH 9, 1888.

ONLY TWENTY MINUTES RIDE TO BURBANK.

Returning, will reach Los Angeles at 3:30 p. m.

There will be no Auction Sale, and no one will be asked to purchase property. Our only object is to afford an opportunity to see Burbank and form their own opinion from a personal examination of its merits. In this living competition for public favor among the growing towns of Southern California, the zealous (and sometimes jealous) advocate of his own town will detract from the merits of some rival locality that is pushing past him to the front. In this way some unfair statements have been put forth as to the merits of Burbank. So confident are we that a personal visit to Burbank will refute and silence all such statements, we have decided to run this First Pleasant Excursion and invite everyone to join us, spend a pleasant day, examine and decide for themselves. We have never had an excursion, never employed a brass band or had a street parade; have offered no lottery schemes to tempt purchasers to invest. But without any show or parade we have in a few months sold over 900 town lots and 2,000 acres of lands adjoining, aggregating nearly $600,000. In less than ten months a grain field has been converted into a growing, prosperous town of over 250 BONA FIDE inhabitants. WATER, pure, clear and abundant has been piped to every lot in the town. A 60 room hotel, a street car line one and a half miles in length completed and in operation; brick block erected; store and bank building completed. A $7000 School House under contract; two churches in process of construction; a Furniture Manufactury, to employ from 100 to 200 workmen. and to be in operation by June 1st and new dwellings being commenced every day, bespeak for Burbank a push and prosperity not surpassed by any town of its age in the State of California.

NOTE THE FACT:

☛ That Burbrnk is to-day the most prosperous suburb of Los Angeles.
☛ That Burbank will within ninety days have better and cheaper railroad communications with Los Angeles than any other suburban town
☛ That Burbank will have the largest Furniture Factory on the Pacific Coast.
☛ That Burbank has the most perfect water system, the purest and a super abundance of water.
☛ That Burbak possesses a most equable climate—cool in summer and warm in winter.
☛ That Burbank is the Commercial Centre of one of the most fertile and fruitful valleys in Southern California.
☛ That Burbank is surrounded by a country that will grow all kinds of cereals and fruits, including oranges and lemons, olives and English walnuts.

AN IMPORTANT INTERVIEW

With Mr. H. S. Ranson, of the Los Angeles Furniture Company.

Yesterday a HERALD reporter met Mr. H. S. Ranson, of the Los Angeles Furniture Company, and asked him as to the future intentions of his company. The reporter was asked to come to the old stand of the company on Main street. On arriving there he found a number of workmen giving the store its finishing touches, and a look around showed that a great deal more room had been added to the place. On being asked when they expected to receive their goods, Mr. Ranson said that at the present time they were daily receiving from two to five carloads of the choicest production of the best furniture factories of the East. On being asked where they put all this stock Mr. Ranson laughed and said if the reporter would go with him he would show him through the larege warehouse, whis is located on the corner of Aliso and Keller streets. Arriving there the scribe was surprised at the display, for he had never seen before such a large amount of fine furniture. Being told that this must be one of the largest of its kind in the State, Mr. Ranson said it was the largest west of Chicago.

"How much floor space have you?" asked the scribe.

Mr. Ranson replied: "There are over 18,000 square feet, and from this time on to the day of our opening we will receive larger lots than now, from the fact that our buyer, Captain F. F. Johnson, cannot be beat. He is fully alive to the wants of our patrons, and we have great confidence in his assurance that the Los Angeles people have never seen so many fine goods as will be shown on our opening day."

"Mr. Ranson, would you object to say what your business amounted to last year?"

"Well this seems like a leading question, but I may as well tell you that our business exceeded $800,000, and the coming year we expect it to reach a million or more. As you have seen, our facilities are better by one-half than last year, why should we not?"

This the reporter could not but see. This company is made up of the most substantial citizens of this county and their friends will look with pleasure to the grand opening, which will be about the first of April.

CATARRH!

THROAT DISEASES, BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA,
CONSUMPTION

Together with diseases of the EYE, EAR and HEART, successfully treated by
M. HILTON WILLIAMS, M. D., M. C. P. S. O.,
Hollenbeck Block, cor. Spring and Second.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED.
This has been demonstrated in thousands of cases treated by
DR. WILLIAMS,
With his new system of medicated Inhalations combined with proper constitutional remedies for the liver, stomach, blood, etc.

Probably no system of practice ever adopted has been so universally successful as that introduced by Dr. Williams for the cure of Catarrh, Throat Diseases, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

CATARRH.

Catarrh is often regarded by the patient as a cold in the head, and he often expresses his astonishment at his remarkable tendency to contract a fresh cold. Indeed, he declares he is scarcely free from one cold before he takes another; and he is always exceedingly careful; it is also a matter of surprise to him that the cold always seems to settle in the head and throat.

At times many of the symptoms of Catarrh may seem to abate, and the patient is led to hope that the disease is about to wear off; but another class of symptoms soon appear, and he learns to his horror that instead of recovery from the disease, it is somewhat changed in its character and has extended to the throat. A sense of weariness is sometimes felt in reading, speaking or singing, hoarseness at times occurs, a sensation of dryness is sometimes felt in the throat, or it appears that some foreign substance, as for instance, a hair, obstructed the throat: there becomes a sense of languor and fatigue, the breath lessens upon a little exertion, a short, hacking cough, a peculiar sound in clearing the throat, a feeling as though there was not room enough in the chest to breathe; these and other symptoms occur after the disease has made considerable progress. Then it is a time when consumption is about to begin its dreadful work. Up to this time the progress of the disease may have been slow, and the patient may, in expressing his confident hope that it will "wear off," declare that he has had the catarrh for years, and has not seemed to become much worse, and trusts that he will "by and-by" recover. But this delusion is the grand error which has peopled our cemeteries with consumptive forms, as all forms of catarrh end finally in consumption.

Inhalations are applicable in all diseases of the respiratory organs, but must be prepared for each individual case as they severally require.

By the employment of proper inhalation in the form of medicated vapor (not steam or spray), we are able to produce immediate and direct action upon the diseased surface in the pharynx and nasal passages, for air will find its way into the most remote and intricate cavities, where it is impossible to make fluid applications. By these means every case can be cured.

Persons desiring treatment by this system of practice can use the remedies at home as well as at our office, and which will cause no inconvenience or hindrance to business whatever.

I have seen so many of these cases cured that I do not consider any case hopeless, unless both lungs are seriously involved. Even then the inhalations aid us in dissolving the mucus and in contracting and healing the cavities, which nothing else can do with the same success.

The very best reference from those already cured.

CONSULTATION FREE.

Those who desire to consult with me in regard to their cases had better call at the office for consultation and examination, but if impossible to do so, can write for a copy of my Medical Treatise, containing a list of questions. Address

REAL ESTATE.

TO SYNDICATES.

We, the undersigned, now present you one of the best bargains eve offered in Santa Barbara county. It is no less than the celebrated El Capitan ranch of Three Thousand acres, lying upon the ocean front 20 miles west of the city of Santa Barbara. Let us describe: This ranch has nearly two miles of unsurpassed ocean front, with a magnificent harbor and a superb bathing beach extending along its whole front. The celebrated El Capitan river of 200 or more inches of pure crystal mountain water forms the western boundary line, of which the ranch owns one-half, and which descends at the rate of about 300 feet to the mile. The never-failing stream of Los Cañada Corrals runs along its eastern border and contains some 30 or more inches of pure, clear mountain water, which wholly belongs to the ranch, besides which there are several living springs and a magnificent sulphur spring which for sanitary purposes is worth the price of the whole property. In addition to the above there is estimated to be at least 60,000 cords of live oak wood, for which there is now a standing offer of $2.50 a cord in the tree. Also remember this is the celebrated and only summer resort for the Santa Barbara people, where the beautiful El Capitan comes flowing down to the ocean from the mountains above.

The Southern Pacific will within a few weeks run through this ranch and land its passengers upon the beautiful banks of the Capitan. Surveyors are now at work on the ground surveying out the townsite and villa blocks preparatory to the rush of visitors during the coming summer months.

This Florence of America is now offered for 30 days as a whole, with its 60,000 cords of wood, at the rate of $80 per acre.

AND
—TO THE—
Semi-Tropic Land & Water Co.'s
29,000 ACRES RIALTO! 29,000 ACRES
Tuesday, March 13, 1888.

THIS BEAUTIFUL TRACT CONTAINS THE MOST VALUABLE CITRUS LAND!
TO BE FOUND IN THE
Golden Orange Belt of Southern California
The quality of soil is unsurpassed for the growth of Oranges, Lemons, Figs, Raisins, Grapes, etc.

"Why is this the choicest spot on earth for citrus fruit?"

FIRST—It is the very choicest MESA LAND in all California, the home of citrus fruit. The water supply is unequaled, and of the purest quality of mountain water. The water system of this company is the most complete system of any land and water company of Southern California. The company get their water from the never-failing Lytle Creek, and it is piped to each and every twenty acres by means of an undergrondd cement subway, giving a continuous flow of two miners' inches to each twenty acres, or one miners' inch to ten acres This supply of water is deeded with the land. The supply of domestic water is all that can be wished for.

This beautiful tract is over 400 feet higher than Riverside, and is perfectly free from scale or any pests—which are peculiar to San Bernardino county, the citrus belt of the world. There is no danger to the most delicate fruits, as this beautiful tract is entirely free from frost or fogs. There are contracts now let for over 15,000 orange trees, to be set out this spring; also over 10,000 beautiful shade trees—pepper, eucalyptus, etc.

Rialto, the townsite of this garden spot, is situated only three miles from San Bernardino and overlooks the entire surrounding country and towns — Riverside, San Bernardino, Colton, Redlands, Lagonia, etc. The transportation is unsurpassed, being on the A., T. & S. F. R. R and S. P. R. R. The motor line will be completed to Rialto from San Bernardino in about sixty days.

Rialto, which is less than six months old, has made some of the most substantial improvements of any young town in Southern California, consisting of a fine Hotel, costing $25,000 and furnished in the most complete and modern style. The hotel is now open, and is doing a fine business. Ex-Governer Merrill, of Iowa, has built an elegant residence, costing $8000, and will make Rialto his permanent home, as will many other of our most prominent men, who have bought in this "Beautiful Garden Spot." There are over forty houses now completed in Rialto, consisting of hotels, restaurants, grocers' stores, hardware stores, meat shops, postoffice, newspaper (The Orange Grower), and one of the finest depots on the line. Riverside avenue, which runs through the center of Rialto, and the main thoroughfare will be one of the grandest avenues in California. The Company is laying bituminous sidewalks along this elegant avenue, and are setting the most choice variety of shade trees along the entire avenue.

P. S.—Any one wanting to enjoy the comforts of life can buy this land in 5, 10 and 20 acre tracts at from $200 to $500 per acre, and, by setting it out in citrus fruits which grow to perfection here, can in a short time be perfectly independent, and have a home that any one can say he is proud of.

Come and join us on the excursion, and you will see a citrus country not to be equaled in the world.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.

Criticisms on Defoe's Famous Book.

FULL OF GLARING ABSURDITIES

A Nineteenth Century Iconoclast Humorously Disposes of Crusoe and His Man Friday.

Critical estimates frequently perpetuate themselves, not by new and original indosement, but by the force of authority; and since our literary opinions are too often derived at second hand, it is always in order to revise them. In our iconoclastic age, when it is no sacrilege to reduce Homer to a myth and Shakespeare to a dummy, we may be pardoned for destroying in one fell blow the fame of Daniel Defoe as a realist. We shall consider a few of the defects of his masterpiece.

In drawing the character of Robinson Crusoe, Defoe studiously avoids investing him with the offensive omniscience of the heroes of modern fiction. This is laudable. But when a castaway in desperate straits happens to find all he wants in the hull of a ship, we may rejoice at his luck, or, in fiction, at the special providences of the author; but we respectfully fail to discover in the castaway a hero triumphant over hostile environment by force of his individuality. If Crusoe is made to excite the sympathy and interest of ordinary folks by his character as a plain, average man, he is allowed to hover too lovingly around the wreck—returning to it and drawing from its stores long after it has broken up in many a retrospective parenthesis. Then in identifying the salvage Defoe does omit such articles as furniture and pottery, which Crusoe himself is to supply; but even here the novelist probably stays his generous hand because he felt that a solitary man must be employed, if only to preserve his sanity; and the prescribed antecedents of Robinson Crusoe precluded the idea of his working from force of habit or love of toil, and hence some simple necessaries within the range of amateur manufacture were withheld as an incentive to labor. Of course it was highly probable that pottery and ship's furniture should be found in the wreck, but something had to be omitted for the foregoing reasons, and Defoe knew that Crusoe would attempt furniture and pottery when he would despair of manufacturing guns, ammunition, tools, compasses and perspective glasses. The question of mechanical genius took precedence over one of probability. Defoe did not want to have a raving lunatic on his hands. His powers were not equal to a dozen chapters on the metaphysics of lunacy. His Concord vocabulary was small. Going into other details, it is also obvious that Defoe has no respect for ethnological proprieties. For when Friday—not yet fully emerged from savagery—finds that the victim saved from the cannibalistic picnic is his father, he manifests great joy by uncouth caresses and prolonged gymnastics. Indeed, so overpowering is his burst of filial affection that he forgets to pause and make a few natural inquiries about his mother, whereas all authorities agree that the savage tribes are singularly apathetic toward aged parents, who are generally maltreated and compelled to do all the work. According to the returned missionary, the sprightly cannibal youth, on attaining his majority, licks his father and converts him into a hewer of wood and drawer of water, while a mother's fostering care is requited by enforced service at the washtub, where, as it merely happens, her labors are light. On the first festive occasion, too, he is proud to toast his granddam, and on a spit at that; for he declines to maintain superannuated live stock for sentimental reasons. Coming back to the case in hand, then, we must insist that had Friday acted in consistency with his nature he would not have cried out to Crusoe so promptly and rapturously that the rescued man was his father—he would have mentioned the fact some day in casual conversation. Possibly, however, Friday was overjoyed at the prospect of putting his work off, as of yore, on the old man, who, so far as the text shows, displayed no unusual emotion at finding his son. We can merely mention a few other inconsistencies. The Spaniard, who is so exhausted from the cruelties of the cannibals that after a long rest he is unable to climb over Crusoe's ladder, "flew upon his murderers like a fury," and slew many of them. This is shameful, belittling of cannibalistic prowess. Again, if "it was impossible for the cannibals to conceive that a man could dart fire and speak thunder and kill at a distance," how was it that those escaping in the canoe, "worked hard to get out of gunshot?" Defoe rejects a probable denouement for his story by rescuing his hero and Friday and bringing them to Europe. Like Lear, Crusoe was artistically doomed to sink beneath the buffetings of fortune; and Friday, at last, should have been cut off suddenly when he was playing a practical joke on the "Pyrenean Bear," an animal of whose habits Defoe forgets that Friday was necessary ignorant, and which that personage seems to have reregarded as a species of coon. Surely here was the appropriate juncture at which to lose Friday, his death by a chance arrow in the Second Book is undramatic and uncalled for. The last outrage upon verisimilitude which we shall notice is the incident in which Crusoe, after a disappearance of twenty-eight years, writes to the overseer of his Brazilian estate, and for a reply receives an enormous fortune in cash. Now, if the overseer had replied that he could not recall anyone named Cruso, or if the local postmaster had written to say that the overseer had absconded to the Argentine Republic years before, the incident would have been natural. As it is, the reader instinctively asks, in critical parlance, "What are they giving us?" If Crusoe was predestined to come off with a fortune in the end, Defoe, instead of packing his Frankenstein off to the East, should have adopted a natural sequel, and put his hero into the lecturing field with a panorama illustrating his adventures. Friday could have accompanied him as an eloquent voucher of his veracity—striking terror to big-eyed boys by his significant pantomime, and thus affording the lecturer an opportunity for facetious assuring them that his cannibal was pledged to abstain from veal of this character.—[New York Star.]

SOUTHERNERS IN NEW YORK.

Men Who Have Become Famous for Brains and Courage.

The development of the South, which for the past few years has challenged admiration, has been led and maintained almost entirely by Southern men. Not only have they taken hold in the South, but many have migrated North, where their pronounced individuality has made them a quickly recognized power, and there is nothing, by the way, that stimulates this recognition so readily as a generous amount of self-assertion. The average business man respects and admires a man who has the temerity not only to express his opinions, but to maintain them against all odds. It is, to say the least, forceful, and sometimes acts as a good substitute for a solid bank account.

Among those whose pronunciamiento carries with it weight sufficient to send Wall street mercury from zero to boiling point, or vice verse, we find: Victor Newcomb of Kentucky, the Garetts of Baltimore, Addison Cammack, James R. Keene, the Inmans of Tennessee, General T. M. Logan of South Carolina, President of the Richmond and Danville road; Dr. Norvin Green of Kentucky, President of the Western Union, and others.

Not only has the Southerner shown himself a compeer with his Northern brethren in the financial line, but he made for himself an honored name in the professions. Among the list of Gotham's celebrated physicians we find the South occupying a foremost rank. Dr. John Metcalf is a Kentuckian; Dr. T. Gaillard Thomas, Dr. Wiley, Dr. Arnold, Dr. Jones and Dr. H. Marion Sims are South Carolinians. Dr. Polk is from Kentucky; Dr. Melrose Pallen from St. Louis. Dr. Emmett, Dr. J. Wyeth and Dr. Bozeman are also Southerners.

Dr. Benjamin Simmons, who for his skill in medicine and surgery was known as the American Sir Astley Cooper, was a South Carolinian.

At the Bar the South is represented in New York by Roger A. Pryor, of Virginia, John R. Fellows, of Arkansas, John C. Calhoun, of South Carolina, Burton H. Harrison, of Virginia, A. H. H. Dawson, of Kentucky, and until called before another and higher bar, Judge A. J. Requier, of South Carolina; and Algernon E. Sullivan, of Virginia, shone conspicuously among the legal lights of the metropolis.

To a Southern physician living in Columbus, Ga., Professor Morse was indebted for the conception of the electric telegraph, the suggestion having been given him while riding in a stage coach during a terrific thunder-storm, the Georgian remarking, as huge trees were blasted by the roadside that he saw no reason why this powerful agent could not be utilized for the benefit of mankind. Morse seized the idea and nourished it until it brought forth fruit, for which the whole civilized werld now owes a debt of gratitude.

It is also one of the national traditions that South Carolina had a finger in the architectural pie of the Bunker Hill Monument. It is a singular and noteworthy fact that this same little State of South Carolina has furnished to its country's history as many intellectual lights as any state in the Union, the Declaration of Independence alone showing as many signers from that State as from the great State of New York, and others of equal ratio.

Among the wealthy New Yorkers who have married Southerners may be mentioned John Jacob Astor, who married Miss Gibbes, of South Carolina; Miss Carrie Astor, who married Orme Wilson, of Tennessee; Commodore Vanderbilt, whose wife was an Alabamian; William K. Vanderbilt also married a lady from that State. Mrs. Commodore Garrison claims St. Louis as her home; Mrs. Van Aiken, Kentucky. Dr. Octavius White, of South Carolina, married a Miss Chandler, a granddaughter of John Jacob Astor; Miss Wilson of Tennessee is now Miss Ogden Goelet; Andrew Carnegie found his wife in Washington; John Stevens and Henry Clews married Virginians; Bently Hazel of South Carolina, a Miss Jones of New York; the late President Arthur's wife was a Herndon, of Virginia; James Brewn Potter married Miss Cora Urquhart of New Orleans; Miss Potter, Clarence Carey of Virginia; Mr. Roosevelt married a Miss Bullock of Savannah.

In many of the trades and mercantile pursuits the Southern man finds himself not far behind his energetic Northern brother. Many who came North directly after the war, with no other capital than willing hands and wits sharpened by necessity, find themselves to-day possessed of a competency, the result of energy well applied.—[N. Y. Press.

A KURDISH SEMIRAMIS.

A Woman Whose Story Reads Like the Wildest Kind of a Romance.

People just now in Constantinople are interested in the presence among them of Kara Fatma, the redoubtable female warrior of Kurdistan, who has come on a brief visit to the Turkish capital. Her deeds of prowness date back to the beginning of the Crimean war, when she led a large band of Kurdish volunteers, who fought with singular daring for Turkey. The Ottoman Government remembers her services, and reqhites them by a monthly pension of 5,000 piasters—a sum that in her own frugal home allows her to live with ease. She is tall, thin, with a brown, hawk-like face; her cheeks are the color of parchment and seamed with scars. Wearing the national dress of the sterner sex, she looks like a man of forty, not like a woman who will never again see seventy-five. Slung across her shoulders in Cossack fashion is her long saber, with its jeweled hilt; decorations shine and sparkle on her breast; while the stripes across her sleeves show her to be a Captain of the Ottoman Army. Watching this figure pass along the streets of Stamboul, one is reminded of an episode in the campaign of General Lespinasse in the Dobruja some little time before the allied armies landed in the Crimea. While smoking and chatting one day in his tent with several of his brother officers, the General heard at a far distance a strange music, a medley of drums and clarionets, tomtoms and piercing human cries. Whence came this weird minstrelsy? All the men in camp turned out to listen to it and discern its origin, when over the hills they saw a band of some 300 horsemen approaching them at full gallop. At their head rode a brown-faced woman with flashing eyes and lissome limbs, the very picture of an Amazon. Vaulting from her saddle, she gravely saluted General Lepinasse, and through an interpreter, she told him she had come to fight the Russians, both she and her brave Kurds being completely at his service. That night her men were quartered in camp with the French troops; but they were ill-pleased to be so billited. They wanted their independence, and not even their m's 2 s and leader should barter it away for them. By day-break they were in their saddles, riding on across the hills to meet the dawn, to the sounds of that weird, strident music which had proclaimed their approach.—[Pall Mall Gazette.

Saen-Monte, the Sacred.

A Mexican correspondent of the Nashville American writes: "Immediately back of Ameca-Meca, rising from the midst of a great green valley of the same name—a veritable Sleepy Hollow, surrounded by hills and overshadowed by the twin volcanoes—rises the Saen-Monte, like a huge wart, several hundred feet above the plain. In this land of mountains nearly every city has its Calvary or Holy Hill—but, next to Guadalupe, near the City of Mexico, this of Ameca-Meca is most prominent in the religious history of Mexico. The famous Fray Martin Valencia, one of the country's "twelve apostles," once lived in a cave in the heart of the Saen-Monte. The Indians, far and near, greatly loved this good father, and every year immense crowds made a pilgrimage to his rocky sanctuary. It is related that the pious Fray tamed the wildest animals of the adjacent heights, as well as the little creatures of the woods, so that they all came at his bidding and even lived with him in the cavern. The birds, too, knew the gentle father, and gathered in great numbers to sing their sweetest songs at the entrance to his gloomy abode. He died at last, in a village forty miles away, whither he had gone on an errand of mercy; but the Indians brought his body in solemn procession to the Sacred Mountain, and buried it in its cavern home, which has now become the camarilla of a shrine.

"Within this dim little chamber is a fearfully realistic image of the dead Christ, which, so says tradition, was placed there by Fray Martin himself as early as 1527. Another legen asserts that a burro (Mexican donkey) carrying images to the Cathedral at Pueblo, broke away from his master and found his way to this cave, where he patiently waited for some days, with the dead Christ upon his back, till Father Martin came and unloaded him; and so the good Fray believed that the mule was divinely sent to deposit the image in this particular shrine.

"Like others near to Nature's heart, whose uncultivated minds are like fallow fields, these simple people furnish excellent soil for the growth of superstitions. A tiny seed of it, once sown in their fertile imaginations, speedily attains such sturdy growth that nothing can uproot it. Doubtless such was the case with the denizens of Nazareth, Judea and Galilee some eighteen centuries and a half ago.

"The dead Christ above referred to is certainly a marvelous work being the lightest life-size image in the world, for though large as a man, it weighs scarcely two pounds. It is believed to have been made of the pith of cornstalks, prepared and cemented by some sort of gum impervious to the air, but by whom it was made, or by what mysterious process, no human being knows."

IDENTIFIED AT LAST.

A Soldier Who for Twenty Years Didn't Know Who He Was.

The strange case of Hugh Thompson has just passed through the Pension Office. It is a remarkable story. Thompson left home a boy of eighteen to march with the Union forces. At the battle of Chickamauga he was wounded in the head, and from that time until 1872 his life is a blank to him and his friends.

The army record shows that he was at the battle of Chickamauga. After that he was reported missing, and until a few months ago his family mourned him as dead. Under this impression his father applied for a pension in 1875, but was refused because he was not dependent at the time of the supposed death of his son. From the battle of Chickamauga until he was restored to his friends, Hugh Thompson did not know his own name. Until 1872 he had no consciousness whatever. Where he spent the interval he does not know. In that year he was walking near the little town of Cleveland, in Illinois, when the memories of the war returned. He did not know his name. He was clad in old soldier clothes, with a blue soldier overcoat. He dimly recalled a great battle in which his comrades were hard pressed, and that was all. To his mind the battle was just over. From that time until last year he was a ceaseless wanderer. He had intelligence enough to care for horses and do odd chores, but his name, his family, and his regiment were all a blank. In his wanderings he made his home in Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa and Kansas, picking up three wives, all of whom are dead. His misfortunes appealed to the old soldiers. They cared for him and made many efforts to learn his history. Among them he was known as "Shorty," "Old Reliable" and the "Nameless Soldier." In a little testament to which he clung through all his misfortunes was written the name of Thompson, and this was supposed to be his name. Some time last year he was at a soldiers' meeting in Michigan.

His story was printed in a local paper. This found its way to Van Wert county, Ohio, where the elder Thompson lived. Hope was revived in the old man, who had mourned his son as dead for twenty-five years. He began a search for his son, and finally found him in Kansas and brought him back to the scenes of his childhood. Many things which had baffled memory were recalled. He had been engaged in youth to a girl whom he remembered as "heavy set," and although a quarter of a century had passed there was some peculiarity about her that led him to recognize her at sight. One day he was taken to an uncle's, where many hours of his youth were passed. As he came to the barn a flash of intelligence came to his face, and he said that was the barn he had so often tried to recall.

His own people only identified him through the Testament which his cousin had given him, and which he had preserved, together with some verses she had written. The Pension Commissioner is satisfied of his identity, and a pension will be issued to the poor wanderer in a few days.—[Chicago Tribune.

How Paper Boats are Made.

The building of a paper boat as described is conducted as follows: The boats are made of an ordinary Manilla paper of good quality, usually of five thicknesses, in all, only one-sixteenth of an inch thick, except in parts where there is the re-enforcement of one or two strips. The process of making them is simple. A model of soft pine is made the full size of the boat, the bow becoming of two pieces, which can be detached. The paper is delivered in long rolls. The model is turned upside down on a large frame; one narrow strip of paper and then a second are first laid on where the keel would be, and then one, two, three, four, five sheets are successively laid along and molded close to the model, each as it is put on being coated with shellac and with glue to attach the next sheet closely to it. Thus done up in papers the models are taken into a drying-room, where a heat of about 140 deg. Fahrenheit, continued for five days, consolidates the glued paper into a solid mass. The movable pieces of wood at the bow are unscrewed and taken out, and with this place for a start it is easy to peel the boat off the model, as the peach skin comes off a fresh peach. A keel is now fastened inside the boat, several extra layers of shellac are put on outside and inside, a strip of wood is fastened in for a gunwale, and the shell is presently ready for its fittings, seats and outriggers. They are mostly racing shells from single scull up to 8-oar, but one boat has been built as large as 42 feet long by 4 feet 4 inch beam, to hold forty-two persons, this, of course, being stayed by wooden ribs; and a steam launch 19 feet long, worked by 1-horse power oil engine, boat and engine weighing but 430 pounds, was last fall successfully run at a speed of about 10 miles per hour on the Upper Hudson. The cost is something above that of wood. The single-scull, 21½ feet long by 10½ inches beam, costs from $65 to $100; the eight-oared shell, about 60 feet long by 24 inches wide, costs $400. The racing shells of Harvard, Yale and Columbia in 1886 were all from the same model from one shop, so that the contest was entirely one of skill on even terms. The patent for this method of building boats has just expired.

The Newer Way.

The business of Burglary having Returned but a small Margin for several years, a Circular was issued and all the Prominent Burglars gathered in Convention. After several speeches had been made by leading spirits, Billy the Kid offered the following Preamble and Resolution:

WHEREAS, The business of Burglary has steadily declined for Several years past; and,

"Whereas, The reason for this declination lies in the Fact of Opposition to each other; now, therefore,

"Resolved, That the Burglars of this country organize tdemselves into a Trust for the purpose of Maintaining Remunerative rates."

On motion of Jimmy Safeblower the above was put to Vote and Unanimously adopted, and the Convention adjourned with great good feeling.

—OF—
SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.
Established Fifteen Years Ago.
Published Under One Management and Policy Continuously Ever Since.

THE LOS ANGELES HERALD IS BY ALL ACknowledged to have been the prime factor in the discovery and making known of the resources of this section. To its sagacious outgivings more than to any other agency our marvelous development is attributed.

THE HERALD has from its inception watched with a single eye the budding industries of this portion of the State. For each good enterprise this journal has at all times had a word of cheerful encouragement. In spite of the skeptical, it has survived to see all of its earlier predictions fulfilled to the letter.

THE HERALD to-day takes the lead in all respects among the papers of Southern California. Its first care still is the material, intellectual and social interests of its section. It aims to be truthful rather than over-zealous in its publication of news; to be conservative, rather than over-sensational, in its policy; to be clean and decent, respecting the sacred precincts of the home and fireside, rather than indecently salacious in its tone.

THE HERALD gets all the news from all quarters of the globe with promptness, accuracy and dispatch. Its local staff is energetic and well-trained to miss nothing of real importance to its readers. It is always alive to all public enterprises.

THE HERALD still takes pride in aiding any legitimate material, intellectual or social movement which will benefit the people. No other journal in this section approaches it in these important respects.

WOMEN'S DEPARTMENT.

EDITED BY BELLE MEADE SMITH.

The San Fernando Mission.

Surely no mediæval castle can be more majestic in its decay than the ruins of the old San Fernando Mission. I visited the time-honored spot one dull morning last week, and the shadowy light in which I viewed it produced an impression upon the camera of my mind which nothing can ever efface. The ruins stand in the greenest and most isolated section of the rich and beautiful San Fernando Valley, and have for their background an unbroken line of emerald hills above which the blue mountains tower up to meet the sky. To the left of the road which leads out of the town, a row of tall willow trees are swayed to and fro by the wind; amid them and directly in front of the best preserved wing of the building, is the fountain that in the long, long ago, sent forth showers of the crystal waters which abound in the locality. A little further on the blacksmith shop and the substantial stakes of the Porter Land and Water Company revive the present and slightly dispel old past; but tne instant the tourist turns his back upon these evidences of progress, he again becomes subject to the wierd spell which the scene weaves about him. In one end of the long gallery which faces the highway is the primitive chapel in which services are held every fortnight; while in another dark and mouldy room a Chinese restaurant is in operation. Next to it is a chamber devoted to the nocturnal use of the Celestials. It contains two comfortless beds, a rusty stove and a bench and a number of grain sacks heaped in a corner. Adjoining this apartment is another large, but dingy room, in which a quantity of grain is stored and where a number of birds have built their nests. At the sound of every footfall upon the walk without, one or two or more of them start up and flutter out into the air. Indeed, it is impossible to move anywhere about the Mission without alarming some of the feathered tribe, who seem to have more affection for it than man, even though he is, and they are not, aware of its antiquity and its associations. In fact, it is shocking to learn that within the past year and a half some vandals, doubtless to obtain the lumber, have torn away much of the original sanctuary. In the rear of the gallery, the rugged and irregular outlines of the remainder of the structure present a ghostly aspect which is greatly augmented by the drove of sheep which wander amid its shadows and the tall date palm trees which gravely stand in memoriam of the days and faces so long covered with the ashes of the past. Except the twittering of the birds and the chattering of the Chinese at work about the kitchen, not a sound breaks the profound stillness which characterizes the place; while, with the exception of the occasional team which drives by, or the tourist who on foot wanders amid the scenes, no one is to be seen but now and then a Celestial bearing upon his shoulders a rod on which is suspended two baskets or buckets. Somewhere near the Mission, though, lives an old Indian woman who more than ninety years ago helped to build the walls and who can re call much of the early history of the Mission and its founders. But she is said to be reticent except when conversing with those with whom she is well acquainted, so that the stranger can obtain from her little, if any, information. There are also scattered about the town and the valley, the half-breed descendants of some of the original Indians and Spaniards among whom the first, untiring fathers labored. Some of them are curious specimens of humanity; while all of them are more interesting on account of the traditions which cling to them, than because of any personality of their own.

The People We Meet on the Cars.

The first who attracted my attention a day or two ago were a mother and son who were traveling for pleasure through California. She was a well dressed, austere looking woman with a number of gray hairs and even more sour looking wrinkles. He was a mischievous looking lad of about 15, who was firmly convinced that he had seen a great deal of the world and that he was a connoisseur of feminine beauty. Evidently his mother entertained a different opinion, for with her back half turned to him she either tried to read or look out of the window. But he did not proposed to be thus ignored and either to tease her or to be heard he kept pulling at her sleeve and asking her a great variety of questions. Sometimes she curtly answered him, others she petulantly demanded to be let alone, while again she would permit his nonsense to pass by unheeded. He was not desperately interesting, it is true, but what a callous heart a mother must have who cannot bring herself down to own the hobble-te-hoy-hood of her own boy. Besides, when in after years, he finds "metal more attractive," and she, tired of herself and a too continuous round of pleasure, sees that he is no longer the troublesome urchin, but the man of the world, and so seeks to secure his companionship, will he not remember how she once spurned him and pay her back as she deserves, in her own coin? A red-haired family consisting of a father, mother and two children next claimed my notice. The little girl wanted to sit quietly and look out of the window, but the boy, who was about 4 years old, and who seemed to have monopolized all the animation of the household, somewhat interfered with her engagement by tearing her auburn locks out by the roots and tambling pell-mell into the corner she occupied over the back of the seat. Upon these amusements his mother looked with calm indifference; while his father, who seemed to be blessed with the provibial patience of Job exerted himself considerably to keep the small torments in order. Either the parents agreed with Mr. Ingersoll that brute force ought not be expended upon children, or they had never read that to spare the rod was to spoil the child, for neither of them made the slightest effort to chastise him, until he suddenly turned around and dashed a little mouth organ into the face of the young lady who sat behind him. Then his mother did look a trifle vexed, and did give his hand a little smack, but otherwise things went on exactly as they had done before. "Real estate! Why, do they have real estate in Los Angeles? I had heard so, but then I didn't know," said a loud-voiced woman, to whom I immediately glanced with interest. If Puck had not determined the style by calling sirens such as she, Dianas, I should have described her as a female dude. At all events, she was tall and broad-shouldered and wore a tailor-made dress and a tourists' silk cap. Then, too, she carried a large bunch of choice roses, which on one or two occasions she facetiously tossed at the languishing gentleman who sat opposite to her, and who seemed to be the joint property of herself and her vis a vis. The latter was a lady to whom time had been rather cruel, but who seemed resolved to be gay in spite of him. She, too, wore a large cluster of flowers and a skull-cap, which set off her gray hairs and the malicious lines around her eyes very conspicuously. Albeit, she used her hands in a highly dramatic manner and laughed and talked with a degree of animation suited to a lass of sixteen. I was wondering whether she was what the English aristocracy would call Daisy Millerish, when she suddenly and in a horribly threadbare voice commenced to sing "In the Gloaming." When she reached "Oh, my darling," she looked pathetically at the languishing gentleman, who was so moved that he affectionately put his arm around her. At this juncture, and when everybody in the car were gazing at the group, and disgustfully listening to the song, an old, ugly, but real substantial-looking man, came up and sat down beside Diana, to whom he made considerable effort to make himself agreeable. But she seemed too indifferent to him to respond, whereupon he feebly tried to engage the attention of the singer and the distinguished gentlemen, both of whom ignored him as completely as did Diana. Still he seemed to be so accustomed to such a lack of appreciation that he quietly fell back in his seat and pulled his hat down over his eyes in a manner which seemed to indicate that he was either the unloved husband of one of the women, or the victim who had defrayed all the expenses of the trip, yet whose presence was altogether detrop. Just then Los Angeles appeared in sight. The women took off their skull caps and put on their bonnets, to which were appended yards upon yards of light veiling, and the conductor thrust his head in through the car-door, and, with the usual elocution of such officials, shouted, "Fifteen minutes for supper."

The Chaperon

Is the title of a one and a half column article recently written by Mrs. John Sherwood to the Philadelphia Press. In it she claims that the American girl needs the above protection, and gives a number of reasons which, from a foreign point of view, prove that she is correct. As a clinching argument, she says: "The Prince of Wales, the best bred man in Europe, even in his pleasures, has suggested to more than one of his American beauties that a chaperon is a necessity." Doubtless he is right if the above-named beauty is particulary attractive to him; for we are assured by Gail Hamilton and other reliable writers that by all the good fellows he is regarded as a remarkably "good fellow." The American girl does need pure home influence, the advice of a thoughtful and unselfish mother, and associations so completely above reproach that it is impossible that they can contaminate her innocence and inexperience; but she has no more need of a chaperon than she has of a pug-dog or a canary. Mrs. Sherwood further adds; "now in England the houses of the fashionable would be shut against this innocent young girl, who is so Daisy Millersh (that is the young girl whom the author has previously described as having no chaperon) as it would against the man who cheats at cards; far more than they are shut against the woman who has degraded the name of of wife and mother, especially if such a woman bear an illustrious name; to such an one much is forgiven, but the absence of the chaperon is never forgiven." Well that is all right; if the aristocracy have so decreed it they have perfect liberty to set up whatever social standards they wish; but we are in America, not in England. I for one am glad to say, (although I am ready to admit that England does come next to America) and therefore I resent such innovations as Mrs. Sherwood's chaperon. What if the American girl is "Looked at, catalogued, described." She does not go abroad to pose as a bit of moral sculptor; to the contrary, she visits Europe for the purpose of enjoying or improving herself; and it she cannot be allowed the sweet privilege of eating an apple or a biscuit, when she is hungry, on the street or in the cars, and if she is compelled by the fear of shocking the Dutch or the French or the English, never to address a man except in the presence of a third party, or to leave her hotel unless she is attended by "her sister, her cousin or her aunt," she had far better remain at home. Mrs. Sherwood might as well urge upon American mothers the necessity of forcing their daughters to wear Chinese shoes and to walk like the Celestial sisterhood on the sides of their feet; and yet there are places and people in this great country of ours where such foreign nonsense is accepted as unalterable facts. In Germantown, the most beautiful and interesting suburb of Philadelphia, I am ashamed to state, all aristocratic crazes prevail. Most of its inhabitants are wealthy, educated, and of long-standing; but because the old Child Mausion, of Revolutionary fame, is in the midst of the town, and because innumerable other old houses and names are linked with its history, the Germantown people close their eyes when they ride through more plebian sections; while they actually resent the presence of either man, woman or child who comes from Nicetown or Lioga. The flourishing but recent hamlets which closely adjoin their carefully guarded and historic town.

St. Paul's Hospital.

St. Paul's, or Sister Mary's Hospital, as it is more generally known, is located on Sand street, north of Temple, and is a large, imposing-looking house which stands on the summit of a commanding hill. It is a private enterprise which was started by the good woman who still has it in charge about two years ago. In October last it was, however, taken hold of by St. Paul's Episcopal Church, with which it will in future be identified. The hospital is open to a limited number of free patients, but the majority of the cases who seek its shelter are subject to hospital fees, which are regulated by their circumstances. and conditions. Persons of all creeds are admitted; while few if any of the free patients belong to the church by which this institution is fostered. There are twenty-five rooms in the building and all of the help employed, except in the case of violent delirium, are women. Sister Mary herself is a trained nurse and for years has been conspicuously associated with hospital work. She came to the Pacific coast seven years ago and is the only member of the Episcopal sisterhood in Los Angeles. Indeed, there is but one other worker who is identified with the same order in California. Sister Mary is an agreeable lady, of pleasing countenance and quiet manner, who, attired in a simple dress of gray adorned with a white cap and collar, is peculiarly qualified to bring comfort and good cheer to the couches of the sick and the suffering.

Miscellaneous.

I regret to state that the many gentlemen who have recently bestowed their attentions upon Miss Lute St. John have failed to permanently detain her in this city. She has returned to her Kansas home, but she fully expects to visit Los Angeles next winter, when it is to be hoped that some gallant Californian will make it impossible for her to go away again.

Mrs. Emily G. Valentine, of the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music, is very anxious to see a home for old women established, and states that if such an institution is started she will do her utmost to make it a success.

It will not be the fault of Mr. Guth erie, the obliging young gentleman who is in attendance upon Sheward's shoe department if any lady leaves the establishment with a misfit.

A young lady, whose name I am not at liberty to mention, has recently painted a number of beautiful views obtained in the San Fernando Valley and the country adjoining it. Among her portfolio sketches is a perfect picture of Fremont's Pass, and an old Spanish School house in which the children used to sit upon skins spread out on the ground. The San Gabriel Mission bells and several views of the San Fernando Mission are also in this collection; while the wall painting she has just finished of the best preserved portion of the ruins of the latter, is so fine that it has secured her several orders of the same.

Nobody Knows but Father.

Nobody knows of the money it takes
To keep the home together;
Nobody knows of the debt it makes,
Nobody knows—but father.

Nobody's told that the boys need shoes,
And girls hats with a feather;
Nobody else old clothes must choose,
Nobody—only father.

Nobody hears that coal and wood
And flour's out together;
Nobody else must make them good,
Nobody—only father.

Nobody's hand in the pocket goes,
So often, wondering whether
There's any end to the wants of those
Dependent—only father.

Nobody thinks where the money will come
To pay the bills that gather:
Nobody feels so blue and glum,
Nobody—only father.

Nobody tries so hard to lay
Up something for bad weather,
And runs behind, do what he may,
Nobody—only father.

Nobody comes from the world's cruel storm
To meet dear ones who gather
Around with loving welcome warm.
Nobody does—but father.

Nobody knows of the home-life pure,
Watched over by a mother,
Where rest and bliss are all secure,
Nobody can—but father.

—H. C. Dodge, in Detroit Free Press.

Love's Ways.

Two paths hath Love for entering lovers' feet,
And one is broad, and fair and very sweet,
And every grace of song and flower hath;
The other is a straight and narrow path
Where stones and branches choke the bitter way,
And songs it hath, but never one is gay,
And come who enter are with roses bound,
And some with thorns but none may go uncrowned;
And yet, both ways are thronged with eager feet,
And voices, gay and sad, chant—Love is sweet.

—Henrietta Christian Wright, in Scribner's Magazine.

Onward, Speed Onward.

"Backward, turn backward, Oh! Time, in thy flight;
Make me a child again, just for to-night."
Thus sang the poet a few years ago,
But why he should do so I'm sure I don't know.

But a few years ago, on Eastberne's broad plain,
There was naught to be seen that we'd care for again.
From the river to Crafton, from the south to the north,
There was naught to be seen of man's handiwork.

To be sure we'd the earth, the air and the sky,
And there were the mountains, with summits so high;
There was sage, chaparal, and the lush filaree,
But o'er the broad landscape there was ne'er a fruit tree.

But a few years have passed, and what a difference is there;
We've the orange and apple, the peach and the pear,
The grape and the olive, the walnut and fig,
And flowers galore both little and big.

There's the homes of the farmers that dot all the plain,
And all are so happy they join the refrain:
"From the snow and the blizzard, and the Frost King's cold breath,
We've cut loose forever—our home's here till death."

And towns too are here, the whole plain they cover,
Nestled close up together as a maid and her lover.
There's Redlands and Crafton, Lugonia, Mentone,
Terracina, Gladysta, and Barton—ohone!

So many there are, in the year eighty-eight,
That there's more than enough for one man to relate;
Yet there's Victoria, Mound City and the Mission beside,
And Eastville is coming, if no ill should betide.

If Time should go backward in swift, silent flight,
And make me a child again just for to-night,
'Twould sweep all away, house, people and tree;
Bah! such a mad poet I never did see.

Then onward, speed onward, Oh! Time in thy flight,
New houses and orchards to see every night.
We'll never look backward nor long for the time
When we never had heard of this tropical clime.

OVER THE SUMMIT.

A Great Enterprise on the Down Grade to Completion.

In the earlier period of the history of Hubert Howe Bancroft, Thomas Carlyle characterized the work as "extremely interesting." It has truly been so from the outset, but we apprehend that to most persons, especially those who have not very great leisure or special taste for historical research, the later volumes which trench upon our own times, are of still more interest.

Take for instance the last volume which came from the press in which the "History of Mexico" is completed. It has been a pleasure to read this volume, in order to analize it for the information of our patrons and the public at large, who, perhaps, have not yet had the opportunity to give it special investigation.

A criticism of this book would be in many respects a criticism of the entire work. It is so much like the rest in the roughness of research and clearness of narative, while it is as strongly indivdualized and as different from the other volumes, as the character of the subject requires and leads us naturally to expect.

Our neighboring Republic, in which the conditions are so different from those which prevail in the United States of America, has had its annals traced by Mr. Bancroft, beginning with the traditions and fragmentary remains of Aztec life. All along the line he has exhausted the libraries of Europe and America, in order to command complete information, so far as this could be had, at the same time being enabled by this wealth of data to condense and crystallize. His last volume presents Mexico in the light under which that country is most interesting to American citizens at this time. The old spirit of revolution is dead. Now comes an era of development; slow, but giving promise of advancement that ultimately may be compared with the progress in this country.

There are many inquirers among our citizens regarding the substantial inducements and attractiveness of Mexico, as a field for the investment of capital, and in some rarer instances, as a place for homes Mr. Bancroft shows that for the latter object Mexico is not a tempting country; for the former, he shows by what has been done, that a large portion of Mexico is a territory in which capital may be invested by those who have no better opportunities in the United States. Among the difficulties to be contended against in the Mexican Republic in the way of putting great industrial enterprises on foot are to be considered always these two things: The instability of the Government, and the lack of co-operation among the Mexican people. In other respects, a careful perusal of Mr. Bancroft's history convinces us that the capitalist who goes there from the United States to make money is running away from his opportunities Still, this is not so sharply stated by him as by ourselves. His history deals with facts, and it is a feature of his narrative at all points to leave inferences or conclusions to the intelligent reader.

There is no volume in existence relating to Mexico that we can offer with more assurance to the student of that country's industrial history than Mr. Bancroft's. He leaves nothing unsaid that is requisite to give us a full and satisfactory view of mining, manufactures and fisheries, commerce and railroads, agricultural resources, ecclesiastical affairs —nor does he neglect the social and educational status of the people, which is always a feature of interest to strangers. He touches upon the most interestingly historical of the latest Mexican epochs in such a manner as to bring out the actors in the Maximilian drama with great clearness and graphic force. His pen portrait of Maximilian himself is one that presents the unfortunate prince before us as we might have expected to see him for ourselves, had we been present in the streets of Mexico when the crisis came upon him. Nor is Mr. Bancroft's description of the distressed and mentally overwhelmed Carlotta less true or vivid. We seem to follow her away from Mexico, to her interview with Napoleon, carrying part of the melancholy load that she bears in her journeying.

It is with much neighborhood pride and appreciation of the work done for the cause of American letters and education by Mr. Bancroft that we thus notice his last published work. It is not out of order, in this connection, to state that the colossal enterprise, which has commanded the admiration and applause of historical students and other readers in every sphere of life, and which has been moving forward on a straight line for the last twenty-five years, has now passed its summit and is verging towards completion.

Before the work is done, however, it is Mr. Bancroft's ambition to make his History of California more nearly complete, more thorough, more precise, than any other history of any other country has ever been made. To this end, in addition to the great mass of material that he has got together from the four corners of the earth, and by rummaging into every nook and corner of this State, he has a number of most able, earnest assistants at present in the field who are obtaining for him with all diligence and intelligence such supplementary data as will enable him to accomplish his object without fail. Dr. Edwin W. Fowler, the personal representative of the historian, is in Los Angeles, and during his brief stay he is desirous of meeting as many of our leading citizens as practicable, in order to get from them, as factors in the settlement, growth and present status of this State, and as living witnesses to recent developments, such information as they can give, and which has not yet found its place between the lids of printed books. This is a very valuable character of material. We have met Dr. Fowler and are very much pleased with his earnestness and capability, and we are sure that before he leaves Los Angeles every gentleman here who can contribute to his information for Mr. Bancroft's use, matter of personal and general import, will co-operate with him in carrying forward the researches of the author, which will culminate in the most useful and pleasing monument, not only to himself but to all Californians.

How a King Cured Dyspepsia.

Henry VIII one day lost his way out hunting, and as he had started the chase at Windsor and found himself outside the abbot of Reading's house at dinner time, he must be allowed to have got some distance from his bearing. Clearly, however, the next thing was to dine, and this he did at the abbot's table, the bat-eyed churchman having taken him for one of the royal guards. A sirloin was produced, and the "King "laid on," much marked the abbot, who had as much appetite as a pea-hen. When the roast had almost disappeared before the royal onslaught the churchman could contain himself no longer.

"Well fare thy heart," he exclaimed to the supposed man-at-arms, "for here in a cup of sack I remember thy master. I would give £100 on condition that I could feed as lustily on beef as you do. Alas! my weak and squeezie stomach will hardly digest the wing of a small rabbit or chicken." How cruel a case of dyspepsia in the Middle Ages! I recommend it to the notice of the faculty as a proof that there is nothing new under the sun, not even in this "new disease that is stealing upon us all." Meanwhile the King pledged his host and departed. Some weeks after the abbot was committed to the tower and fed for a short space on bread and water—a novel treatment for loss of appetite which threw the pious patient into the most horrid dejection, "yet not so empty was his body of food as his mind was filled with fears as to how he had incurred the King's displeasure." At the very climax of this emptiness a sirloin of beef was set before him, when the good abbot verified the proverb that two hungry meals make a glutton. He, in point of fact, rivalled the King's performance at Reading and just as he was wiping his mouth out jumped the King from a closet. "My Lord," quoth the King, "deposit your hundred pounds of gold, or else no going hence all the days of your life. I have been your physician to cure you of your squeezie stomach, and, here as I deserve, I demand my fee for the same." Too replete for repartee, the abbot, "down with his dust," and presently returned to Reading, if somewhat lighter in purse, so much more merry in heart than when he came thence.

How a Roadpad Once Bled Blaine.

From the Journal, Lewiston, Maine, comes this anecdotal scrap: Once English Harry and a companion, known as the "New Jersey Congressman," both tramps, arrived in Augusta, and, being in good humor, determined to call on James G. Blaine. It was wagered that the "Congressman" could not get at Blaine, but that, after the return, he (Harry) would not only call and get an interview, but would borrow $2 of him. The forfeits were put up, and away went this particular "Congressman," along the street where so many other Congressmen have gone in years past, until the residence of Blaine was reached. In answer to the bell a neat maid appeared, but, do and say what he would, he could not pass the girl at the door, nor could he get a word to Mr. Blaine until he made known his business. The "Congressman" departed a defeated tramp, but he did not feel very bad about it, for he was very sure Harry could never pass the girl. Later in the day Harry appeared before the door girl, dressed, as usual, in army clothing, and was met with the same sharp question: "What do you want?" Harry now softly told the damsel that h was from Old Pennsylvania, where Blaine once lived; was a veteran of one of her regiments; was on urgent business, and finally got into the house. When ushered into the presence of Mr. Blaine he at once interested him, and a long conversation took place. Harry frankly told his hearer who and what he was, described his life and that of his companions, closing up with the following: "All the boys believe you are the man who should be our Chief Magistrate, and we all hope, Mr. Blaine, that when you next give your banner to the political breeze it may wave at the head of victorious marching columns and be next furled under the dome of the White House." It is hardly necessary to add for Mr. Blaine himself has said it, that the rascal got a new crisp $2 bill and an invitation to "call again."

JACKSON STREET CARS.

One Line That is Run for the Public's Convenience.

A bright young man who has recently visited Jackson, Miss., writes as follows to the Picayune: "Jackson has a street-car line running on a sort of go-as-you-please accommodation schedule. Desiring to see the residence portion of the city I approached the driver of a car and asked him how far out State street the line extended. On his replying 'About two miles,' I asked him if I would get back, thinking he was too young to be out after dark and it might be his last trip. He looked at the mule and then at the vehicle, which had broken its bobstay and parted its hogchains, and dubiously replied, 'I guess so.' The parting of the bobstay and hogchains of the vehicle rendered the front, of the double use as platform and cowcatcher, and the rear step a scraper to clear the roadbed of slippery clay. I thought the residents of this pretty street were deserving of better accommodation, and consequently development showed why it could not be. After depositing my nickel and taking my seat, I asked the driver how long before he would start; he looked at the setting sun and said- 'In a little while.' Presently two young ladies got in, sat down and said to the driver: "Jesse, we have no change, will pay you to-morrow; go ahead and hurry up; we are late for dinner.' And he let her go. At the second corner two more pretty young ladies got in. Conversation: 'Jesse, have you got change for a quarter?' 'No, Miss Georgie, haven't got a cent.' 'Very well; we will pay next time. What in the world did you stay down there so long for? We thought you would never start back.' The ladies got out at the terminus. I helped turn the the car and found Jesse very communicative. He said: 'I have a hard time pleasing those young ladies. Before they go downtown in the morning they send a colored girl out here and make me wait until they are dressed; then when they come home they get mad if I don't start as soon as they get in.' Returning, one lady got in. Conversation: 'Jesse, can you change a dime?' 'No, Miss Mollie.' 'Well, I'll pay some other time.' Result of round trip, seven passengers and only 10 cents in the box."—[New Orleans Picayune.
